having martyred themselves and their wives and families to the spirit of ation-building, and their communities having reached the stage of development where they aspire to sidewalks ment where they aspire to sidewalks and a light and water plant, they have taxed their own industry and enterprise for conveniences of life. Meanwhile the speculator who, in all probability has been applied to the speculator who, in all probability has been applied to the speculator who, in all probability has been applied to the speculator who, in all probability has been applied to the speculator who, in all probability the speculator who, in all probability the speculator who is the speculator who ability has never seen the town, pos-sibly who lives on the other side of the globe, has been permitted to capitalize the enterprise of the town builder and to collect a very lucrative profit thereon by the simple system of acquiring a few corner lots, a profit which is increased by every improvement which the actual residents and town-builders make to their own town.

It is not necessary to state individual instances. Every merchant along the Grand Trunk line or the C. N. R. can look out of his own door—or possibly step out of it—onto the property thru the ewnership of which some holder having acquired it from the rairroad townsite, has made a handsome profit wikifout contributing even his presence to the success of the town.

How absurd for the real town-builders to saddle themselves thru an archade system of licenses, floor space at axes, building and improvement taxes, and every other system of exaction with the cost of their municipal improvements while every dollar thus taken from legitimate industry is an exemption to just that extent of the speciator who, in nine cases out of ten, is never going to use their water, tread their sidewalks or contribute a dollar to the revenue of their light plant.
