BUTTON TOUCHED TO-DAY.

All in Readiness for Major-General Hutton to Put Things Into Motion.

WHAT THE FAIR WILL NOW REVEAL.

Yesterday was Preparation Day, but by 2 p.m. the Exhibition Will be in Full Blast.

Yesterday was preparation day at the Toronto Exhibition, and in all the buildings there was the hum of ceaseless industry. Great progress was made in every department, and, according to promise, there is no doubt that matters will be well forward by the time Major-General Hutton touches the button this afternoon and sets the wheels of the moving for the twenty-first annual industrial exhibition.

In the Main Building the litter was knee-deep, but nearly all the exhibits were completed and set up. The Main Building will be a magnificent scene at the main entrance is a huge globe reaching half way up to the ceiling. The present and the globe itself is studded with tiny and multi-colored electric lights.

In the Machinery Hall the workmen were fairly falling over each other, so numerous were they and so eager to finish their work. The painters were right on the job at work at one end of a flooring while the carpenters were pulling the frame end of the very boards they were working up at the moment.

Other departments were being put into fit and nightfall everything was ready for the opening.
