HANDSOME WEDDING PRESENT eautiful Heintzman & Co.

a Beautiful Heintzman & Co.
Baby Grand Piano.

Many presents rich, rare and beautiful were given to Miss Ada Florence Wagstan of East Queen-street, Toronto, on the occasion of her marriage last week to Mr. James Harris, managing director of the Harris Abattoir Company. The most conspicuous of all, however, was the beautiful and the special property of the Harris and the special property of the special proper ous of all, however, was the beautiful grand piano, made by the old firm f Heintzman & Co., which was a present from the father of the bride. It was a nagnificent instrument, in mahogany case, and very artistically designed, an ornative for the intense delight of his hearers, the speaker said he would not discuss independence, because they were not ready for it, and the hide-bound and very artistically designed, an ornament at all times for the finest drawing room. These baby grand planos of Heintzman & Co. are being most highly praised for their beautiful tonal quality, their delicacy of touch and superior singing quality.

Arsenic and Corundum.

The Alegacy of the Ontario Burgan of the Superior Street Corundum and Superior Super

Mines has returned from a trip thru East-ern Ontario. He attended a meeting at Madoc, called to consider the question the Dominion and Ontario gov of asking the Dominion and Ontario governments to grant a bounty on refined arsenic, and at which deputations were appointed to wait on both administrations in connection with the matter. He also visited the Deloro Gold Mines, where he found that gold and arsenic are being produced in large quantities, the latter at the rate of 80 tons a month. Renfrew County, too, was visited, where corundum is being turned out in large quantities. is being turned out in large quantities.

ABSOLUTE Hal Reid's Latest Success

THE TORONTO WORLD

Playwriting to Hal Reid seems to be as easy as rolling off a log. Last week he had his latest melodrama on the boards of the Toronto Opera House; yesterdaly "A Homespun Heart," a pastoral comedy drama, from the same pen, played to two large audiences at the same theatre. And with all due deference to the success of the former, it might as well be safd that Mr. Reid is at his best in plays of the stamp of "A Homespun Heart." It is one of those sort of plays to which a young fellow can take his best girl, his sister or his mother and have no fear but that they will enjoy it thruout. It is entertaining because there is so much of the "homely" atmosphere about it, and altho there is a disturbing element, yet it is not of the blood and thunder kind. The sturdy manliness and good nature of Andy Markoe, a half wit, who, anowerer, despite this alleged infirmity snows a great deal of horse sense whenever occasion requires, makes him the nero. His abiding faith in his "little sistef" Marion, for whose unhappiness and ruin, and that of all her kin, the villalinous squire is weathirs were destribled. abiding faith in his "little sistef" Marion, for whose unhappiness and ruin, and that of all her kin, the villatinous squire is working, was justified amid hearty applause, as the curtain feil on the family reunion on Christmas morning. Miss Bianche Warren is a most effective heroine, while Harry L. Dunkinson, as the half-wit, and the baby, divided second honors. Charles W. Porter as the "ne'er-doweil" provides good comedy. The company all thru is thoroly competent, and "A Homespun Heart" should prove one of the most popular attractions of the season.
