FINE RECITAL BY BORIS HAMBOURG

'Cellist Repeats Last Week's Great Success in Margaret Eaton Hall.

Boris Hambourg gave the second of his series of three 'cello recitals at the Margaret Eaton Hall last night to an even larger audience than that which heard him last week, which he roused to a pitch of enthusiasm not often demonstrated. His program was equally diversified and afforded again ample contrasts. Beginning with the sonata in G minor, by Guy Ropartz, a composition never yet played here, a modern among moderns, yet sympa netic in the extreme. "Chants Oublies," by Alberto Guerrero, was a lovely dream-like phan-tasy, also heard here for the first time. "Pezzo Capriccioso," by Tschaikovsky, was a sparkling revelation of remarkable deftness on the artist's part. A final group, "Gavotta," by Galectti, early eighteenth century; "Adagio," by Handel, and "Butterflies," by Hamilton Harty, this last fairly carrying his hearers away, ended the remarkably beautiful se' c-tion. Before this, however, the supreme height had been reached in the magnificent concerto in D minor, by Edouard, the captivating rthythms, dazzling colors, the warmof sentiment and wonderful warmth of sentiment and supreme execution, making the performance one seldom equalled. George Reeves played the piano parts with the flawless effects he always attains. The nounced for Friday evening next.

to establish voluntary associations thruout the empire, the formation of which had been commended by the imperial forestry conference held in London last year, in the belief that the voluntary movement would be greatly helpful to the efforts of the official bodies which had been al-ready brought into existence. It had been calculated that the empire pos-sessed about twelve hundred million acres of forest lands, but only onethird were economically productive, and unless the various governments the empire bestirred themselves matter of timber conservation and afforestation, we should be face to face in the near future, not only with a timber shortage, but also with famine prices. It was agreed that the representatives of the Dominions and colonies should communicate with their respective governments with a view to taking co-operative action in promoting the interests of forestry thruout the empire. PINEAPPLE LACE.
