Ruthenian Mission Started in Toronto Under Watchful Eye of Presbyterians, and Advanced With Ornaments of Greek Church Altar.

A Ruthenian Mission, conducted somewhat on the lines of the missions supported in the West by the Presbyterians, has been started in Toronto, in the St. Andrew's Institute, on Neison-street, and, while not under the direct control of the Presbyterians, is, nevertheless, under the watchful eye of the Winnipeg head of Presbyterian missions.

But while missions to foreigners are not unusual here in Toronto, there are some feature about this little place for members of the Greek Church that make it extremely interesting.

make it extremely interesting.

This Sunday the communion will be dispensed in this church according to Protestant methods, altho the Presbyterians claim to have no hand in this innovation. The rest of the service will be distinctly that of the Orthodox Church, or Greek Church, as it is better known, and while the Greek Church has been separated for several hundred years from the Roman Church, the years from the Roman Church, the liturgy contains many Catholic features that are altogether foreign to a service where will be dispensed the Protestant communion, and in a church to which the Presbyterians have given considerable friendly aid.

"Everywhere in the world," he said, "the Y.M.C.A. is the greatest power for developing Christian manhood. I'd rather be the founder of this institution than Lord Nelson." Mr. Warburton thought it was significant that the Y.M.C.A. was so close to the church. "I'm glad the time has passed," he said, "when people thought that it led boys and men from the church."
