INATURE OF BUSINESS

The Company manufactures John Mackintosh's celebrated Toffee, the trade names which are "Old English Toffee" "Treakle Toffee," "Vienna Toffee," "Butter Scotch," "Russian Toffee" "and Buttermilk Toffee" as supplied to Queeen Alexandra and thee Empress of Russia. The business is particularly profitable and possesses the advantage of beeing thoroughly established in Canada, as in all other large countries. An understanding of the profit and sale may be gleaned from the knowledge that over 22 tons daily, or 8,030 tons annually are consumed in Great Britain alone. HISTORY OF JOHN MACKINTOSH'S TOFFEE

THE MACKINTOSH TOFFEE business was established some 40 years ago in the City of Halifax, England. Mr. Mackintosh commenced business absolutely without capital, boiling his celebrated Toffees in an ordinary kitchen pan on his cottage fire. Today Mr. Mackintosh controls the largest and oldest Toffee manufacturing business in the world.

IMPORTED FROM ENGLAND AND UNITED STATES Prior to an establishment in this country, over three cases, or 2,688 packages, of Mackintosh's Toffee were consumed by Canadians daily. This business was done from England and the United States, without the assistance of advertising or local manage-

BROCKVILLE WORKS The Company's building at Brockville are large and commodious, and are constructed and equipped in a manner suitable for the purposes of the business. The most modern machinery and special applianeces installed guarantee a manufacturing capacity of 7 tons of John Mackintosh's Toffee daily, or 2,555 tons annually.

MY OPINION I visited Brockville on January 14th and remained there four days. My sole object in going there was to investigate the works and business of John Mackintosh's Toffee, Limited. I studied the details f the business carefully, and in addition to finding a magnificently ecquipped factory in active operation, I found a good business managed by men of sterling worth and sound reputation, who have a thorough and practical understanding of the business gained at the warks of the parent Company of John Mackintosh, Limited, Halifax, England, the oldest and largest Toffee Manufacturers in the world. The future welfare of these men is centered in the business, and the result of their determination and effort will be the building of a large and immenese enterprise in Canada.

BARLISTS ARE PLOTTING AGAINST KING ALFONSO

In Jaime Said to be Fomenting Uprising -History of the Bourbon

PARIS, Feb. 5.—King Alfonso's troubles are growing. In addition to the military conspiracy as a revealed the ther day, Don Jaime of Bourbon, pretender to the throne, is said to be fomenting another uprising. He is the only son of Don Carlos. He was educated in England and served with distinction in the Russian army.

As in the case of so many of the great houses of European royalty, the Bourbons owe their name to distard detect. It was originally one of the great baronial families of the kingdom of France, owning the rich provinces of the centre, known as the Bourbonnals, whence it took its name. The first of the Bourbons known in history was Adhemar, who flourished at the close of the ninth century. In 1272 the stouse of Bourbon had become extinct, same from Beatrice of Bourbon, sole lieiress of the name and possessions, who married Robert, Count of Clerment, sixth son of King Louis IX. of France, popularly known as St. Louis. Their son Louis became Duke of Bourbon in 1327, and had two sons, Peter, Duke of Bourbon, who was killed at the slege of Romeo by a platol shot nied by Benvenuto Cellini, and a younger son, James. Comte de la Marche, whose son in turn, on marrying the helress of the illustrious house of Vendome, assumed the title of Count and Duke of Vendome. His descendant Anthony, Duke of Vendome, married Jeanne d'Albert, Queen of Navarre, and their son, Henry, became in turn, king of Navarre and king of France and the father of Louis XIII. of France. Jeanne d'Albert, Queen of Navarre, and their son, Henry, became in turn, king of Navarre and king of France and the father of Louis XIII. of France.

The Neapolitan, the Parma and the Orleans branches of the House of Bourbon are very prollife. The Count of Caserta, head of the Naples branch, has eighteen children, and the ex-Duke of Parma twenty, while King Louis Philippe also had a large tribe of olive branches, the descendants of whom are to be found scattered all over Europe. Thus, one of his grandsons, Prince Caston of Bourbon, Comte d'Eu, married the Crown Princess of Brazil, and his sons, Prince Louis and Prince Anthony of Bourbon of Orleans, were in this country a couple of years ago.

Princess Marie of Bourbon Orleans, daughter of the Due de Chartres, is the wife of Prince Waldemar of Denmark. One of the sisters of the Duke of Orleans is Queen of Portugal and another is the consort of the royal Italian Duke of Aosta. There are Bourbons who have married into the reigning House of Bavaria, and even into the Hohenzollern family, while the Duke of Orleans himself has a wife who is an archduchess of the Hapsburg dynasty.
