THE PEOPLE'S SHARE.

(From Daily Sun 23rd.) The mayor's meeting on Saturday showed that the citizens of St. John do not propose to allow the volunteer to make all the sacrifice. Our citizens are willing to contribute either as city taxpayers or as subscribers to a patriotic fund. They are not very clear as to the method of applying the money to the purposes intended, but that is because they are not fully informed as to the conditions. There is room for differences of opinion on these matters of detail. The Sun ventures to offer its own views on certain main points connected with the question before the citizens.

In the first place, it seems to be shabby thing for the Dominion of Canada to accept for her contingent any pay from the imperial treasury. This corps should to as a Canadian contribution to the war, and the cost should be borne wholly by Canada Some one has spoken of the contingent as a. "C. O. D. corps," meaning that the British government is expected to begin to pay the men as soo as they are delivered in Africa. It is not the spirit of the Canadian people which makes this reproach possible. The people of Canada did not ask the government to offer soldiers on the condition that the home government should pay them. We all know that Mr. Chamberlain's despatch of three weeks ago has been quoted to show that the British government laid down these exactions. But we also know that this despatch was not sent in acknowledgment of a government offer of troops. It was a reply to individual mu offers of service. Naturally the war and the rear. Thus the British army office would not expect officers to pay the men out of their own pockets, and at that time the premier of Canada was declaring that the dominion government had no power to pay. Now that we are sending a Canadian corps, instead of parties of recruits for the British regular regiments, this country must relieve the home government of the obligation to pay the men. We have no doubt that the parliament of Canada will take this view. Secondly, the Canadian government will not allow the members of this corps less pay than is received by the Canadian regulars. A number of Canadian regulars. A number of these regulars are going to the front. It is clearly impossible that these men, who will be drawing forty cents per day until they arrive at the seeme of war, shall therefater be reduced to a little more than half that allowance. The Canadian rate of pay must undoubtedly be continued until they return. It is equally impossible that the turn. It is equally impossible that the Canadian regulars should receive forty cents per day, while the volu who serve beside them are put off with less. Sir Charles Tupper announced at Woodbridge the other day that when the house met he proposed to test the feeling of parliament by proposing that the Canadian corps be paid in full by the dominion. It is not probable that the opposition leader will need to do so. The matter is not likely to be left in its present condition so long as that. We may therefore probably take it, for granted that the volun-teers who are enlisting will receive from the dominion to by cents per day from the time of their enlistment until their return. This will come to them whether they take the English shilling allowance? To begin with, it is only fair that New Brunswick should contribute her share toward the maintenance of the Red Cross service, and feeling prompts the people to supply the boys who go war with anything that car add to their personal comfort. But this does not involve a large outlay. It will, moreover, be agreed that forty cents per day, or $2.80 per week, is not large pay for men, most of whom are now earning more than' three times that much. The citizens

What is wanted in addition to this add to their allowance. Then we must remember that the Canadians are going to a war. In the ordinary course of events they may be to take a share in the fight ing. The fact may as well be faced that if the corps goes into action some of these lads will be killed, and some crippled for life. Even if the regiment should never go into action, there are the chances of disease, and the results of exposure, besides the ordinary risks of travel and adventure. The Canadian government will, as we hope and expect, take the place of the imperial government in providing pensions for those who may be disabled. But these pensions are always inadequate, and there is no satisfactory provision for the families of the dead. It may be that nearly all those who are enrolled are not married, and have not now the dependance of their parents or other relatives. But also it which make a second or third son the support of a family. In may cases it would be suitable to use some part of the fund in procuring insurance on the life of the volunteers from this province. Probably $2,500 to $3,000 would insure all the New Brunswick volunteers for $2,000 each for a year. This investment would relieve the men of one anxiety and would afford a protection to many families. protection to many families who may not now be fully aware of their share in the risk. Or perhaps instead of buying insurance it might be thought to put away the money for the enafit of the families who might suf-

There is no doubt that all the money likely to be raised may be applied with advantage for the benefit of the volunteers after the government shall have done its duty.

THE WAR.

(From Daily Sun 23rd.) The repulse of the Boer attack on Glencoe, the dislodgement of their orce and capture of their position on Friday, has been followed by another evere battle. In this engagement the British took the offensive and succeeded in driving the Boers from their strong post between Ladysmith and Glencoe. The position at Elandslaagte was occupied by a Transvaal expedition several days ago, at which time train was captured and bridges destroyed. This was a brilliant and sudden operation. In enabled Joubert to get a force of 4,000 men between General Symons, who was at Glencoe, and General White, who, with the larger body, was at the base of operations forty miles be-

Had Joubert been able to follow it un by crushing Symons at Glencoe, as he hoped to do with the advantage of position and superior force, the Boers would have won a great advantage. They would then have had command of the whole of Natal as far south as Ladysmith, or more than one hundred miles into the British possessions Ladysmith could then have been at tacked from east, west and north by Joubert's main army, supported by the body which was defeated on Saturday and by the whole Orange Free State force, brought in through Van Neeman's Pass from the west. The plan seems to have involved yet other oper-ations. Ellandslaagte is not named on many of the war maps, but it is on the main line of rallway, some fifteen miles north of Ladysmith. The Boer which occupied this position reached it from the east, having prossed the Buffalo River at Rocke's Brift, thus circling around the British advance. It was believed that only half the force which made the de tour occupied the position taken, and that 4,000 men were continuing the movement still farther south, to get inication Setween General What in Northern Natal, embracing the larger part of the force in Africa, would have been hemmed in among the mountains and cut off from com munication.

But things have not happened that way. The Dutch were defeated on Friday by General Symons, who this saved his position and his army. At the same time the Free State Bu ers were easily beaten off at Besters and another point on their own fron-fler. And new General White's force, or a part of it, has recaptured the po sition at Elandelaagte, and the line of communication is probably once more open as far as Glencoe and Dundee:
All this has not been done without heavy loss. The killed and wounded on the British side in the two main battles number at least 300. The splendid traditions of the service have een maintained by the personal bra very of both officers and men. Out of forty who were killed in the battle at Glencoe one in every four was an officer. One in every nine of the wounded is an officer. The proportion of loss of officers is several times greater than that of non-commissione officers and men. This it attributed to the fact that the officers refused to use cover, while the men had this advantage. Such a course seems to be almost reckless, but it doubtless was the important element in the success of the long charge up the hill. Again, it is probable that the Boers picked off the officers when they could recognize them. The Boers appear to have fought bravely in both battles. The numbe of the killed in the fight at Glencoe attests to their courage. They seem to have made a most stubborn resistence in Saturday's fight, and in the loss of their commander they repeat the experience of the British in the battle of the previous day. It is no mean foe that the British are meeting among these African hills. In two days the British loss in battle has been many times greater than that of the United States in the whole war with Shain While these exciting occurrences ar reported from the eastern frontier of the Transvaal, intelligence from the scenes of action on the western border is filtering through to the coast. may well share the sacrifice that the That sturdy young soldier Colonel young men make by raising a fund to Baden-Powell, shut off from all communication with the outer world, with his little force of local volunteers encompassed by many times the number Boers, has held his own, and beater off the foe at every attack. Probably when the war is over it will be found that he and his men are not the least among the heroes of the campaign.

CANNOT CHANGE FAST ENOUGH

The trouble with Mr. Bourassa, M P. for Labelle, is that he cannot change his mind as fast as his leader. Mr. Bourassa now says the same thing that the premier said a fortnight ago, and Mr. Tarte said a week ago. They have done what they declared they would not do, and Mr. Bourassa, who accepted and reported their statements, has resigned his seat. He is the fourth member from his own province who has adopted this form protest. The others were induced may be different a month or a year abandon their resignations, which, hence, Circumstances may arise with the help of a sympathetic speaker, they have been able to do. Notwithstanding Mr. Bourassa's re fussal to change his mind on the military question, he may be willing to change it on the resignation question. He is an eloquent and well educated young French Canadian, who made a decided impression in his speech on the address last session. It was in this speech that he laid down "Bourassion system of eththat forth which set

Mr. Bourassa is a grandson of Papineau, and is secretary of the Interna tional commission which is going to resume sittings at Quebec after the Alaskan boundary is settled.

THE PROGRESS OF AN IDEA.

The project of sending a Canadian corps to South Africa is gradually taking the form that the people de-mand. The conditions which the war proposed when the Canadian offer was only that of individual volunteers are not applicable to the corps offered a week ago by the government: The contingent will be forwarded as a Canadian corps, and will remain distinctive regiment until the end the chapter. At last accounts one of the conditions mentioned in Mr. Chamberlain's acceptance of individual offers remains unrevoked. This is the arrangement by which the menthave only the pay of British regulars, and the shilling is to be paid by the mother country. The above condition will only remain as long as the dition will only remain so long as the Canadian government refuses to pay the men, and that will not be much longer. The loyal people of Canada have got the government on the run and will keep the highisters moving until they reach the proper position.

THE COLUMBIA WINS. In the competition for the America cup the Columbia is an easy winner. The behavior of the Shamrock in some of the earlier races that were not finished led to the impression that under certain conditions she was the faster boat. It is now pretty well established that the Columbia can beat her under almost any circumstances and that in an all-round competition the United States boat is unquestionably superior. There is no room for protest, and no cause for complaint. The contest has been carried through in true sportsman spirit. Sir Thomas Lipton gain ing in personal esteem as his craft fel in popular favor. He joins the proces sion of sportsmen who have crossed the Atlantic for the old cup and who went home without it.
