WHAT THE BRITISH PRESS THINKS OF THE CANADIANS

Attitude of Ministers from Dominion Commended by Newspapers of Mother Country---Necessity of Action Along Lines Suggested by Mr. Borden Becoming Daily More Apparent.

(Montreal Star.)

London, July 20.—Premier Borden's second week in London is drawing to a close with favorable opinion regarding the man and his utterances steadily mounting higher. He has been honored by the King, feted by the great nobles of the land, and acclaimed by the multitudes, and praised by the press, as seldom falls to the lot of even an honored son of these lands let alone overseas representatives.

His utterances have arrested attention. They have been frank and outspoken. His desire that the Canadian Government should assist in the defence of the Empire, but his dogged determination that his country shall share in the councils that determine the course of the Empire in foreign affairs and naval policy, have impressed all.

His statements in regard to the past, present and prospective material development of Canada have done much good. As one financier put it to the Star:

"Combination or no combination on the part of capitalists, yet the higher profit from Canadian flotations as the result of Mr. Borden's speeches and attitude are having an effect that merely in dollars and cents, no man can estimate. A Canadian naval loan would go like wildfire."

His designation of the Parliament at Westminster as not truly Imperial was a bold utterance, made as it was at a function exclusively composed of Lords and Commoners, but the only defence uttered was a feeble wail from one section of the press that the machinery of government was justified by the ease with which it passed from insular and domestic to affairs of Imperial import.

The legislators themselves applaud the words in dispraise of their own functions, whose weakness they best know.

When dealing with Canada's accomplishments, prospects and possibilities there is an utter absence of boasting in the Premier's remarks. Instead, he uses facts, inference and simile, just as when attesting the Dominion's loyalty to the Empire, his manner of speech is more emphatic than the spoken word, his earnestness investing his simple utterances with dignity and force.

In all that has publicly transpired in this history-making trip of Premier Borden and his colleagues, Canada has been creditably and well represented. If the naval policy decided upon be equally acceptable, beneficial and sound as their public acts and utterances, Canada is bound to reap credit and the Empire strength to an incalculable degree.

That is the general opinion, wherever one turns.

British Press Comments.

The visit of the Canadian Ministers to England, and the outspoken attitude they have adopted in discussing the problems which occasioned their trip to the mother land are arousing widespread commendation on the part of the British press. Scarce a discordant note is heard, and as the news of the progress of the conference is chronicled the general satisfaction aroused by the turn events are taking is expressed in the editorial columns of most of the papers.

The following are among the things some of the leading British journals have to say about the Canadian Ministers:

AUDACITY AND HOPE.

(London Times.)

A large audience, invited by Mr. Page-Croft, M. P., the chairman of the Imperial Mission, and Mrs. Page Croft, assembled yesterday afternoon in the Connaught Rooms to hear an address by the Hon. George Foster, the Canadian Minister of Trade.

Lord Selborne presided, and in some introductory remarks he spoke of the great part that Mr. Foster was playing in Imperial questions that were going to decide whether the Empire was to continue to exist or not. They were approaching the crisis in the fate of the Empire and that fate would depend upon the decision taken within the next few years. It was the fundamental principle of the Empire that each part was independent in its internal affairs, but beyond those internal affairs there lay the whole field of trade, of foreign policy, and of defence, which were the interest of all. They knew that the door to one great branch of these subjects was banged and barred. He would be the last to make the slightest attempt to drag Mr. Foster into the vortex of our domestic political quarrels, but he might be allowed to say that however much afraid the party in power might be of raising the question of Imperial preference, the Unionist Party were true to their principles on that subject. (Cheers.)

There was, however, no wish dearer to their hearts than that naval and foreign policy should be national and not party, and therefore Mr. Foster might rest assured that any understanding which he and his colleagues might reach with the Government on these subjects would be accepted by the whole nation. (Cheers.)

Mr. Foster, who was loudly cheered, said that ever since he had been a student of the development of the Empire he had never doubted that all the tendencies were towards unity. The common interest had stirred concurrent action, and in the matter of trade, whether they were "Preferentialists" or not, they could agree that to a certain extent co-operation had taken place. With something of audacity and a great deal of hope the Dominions had cast their grappling irons of Preferential trade on the United Kingdom. The attitude of the oversea Dominions and of the Empire towards each other, full as it was of the sentiment of loyalty, must naturally change as their population increased and wealth grew. The child obeyed because it was ordered to; the man because his reason was appealed to. His plea was that on neither side should they forget to think about these things. He agreed with the chairman that the answer must not be long delayed—that this was about the psychological moment when one more step forward had to be taken. They must come to their conclusion upon what that step should be by mutual counsel and consultation.

THE CANADIAN MINISTERS.

Mr. Borden received many callers at the Savoy Hotel yesterday. He is to stay for the week-end with Mr. Macmaster, M. P., at Mayhurst, Woking.

Questioned yesterday as to the opportunities offered by Nova Scotia, Mr. Borden stated:—

"Nova Scotia is an excellent field for immigration, especially for those who have experience of fruit growing or a taste for that occupation. The Annapolis Valley alone, though quite limited in area, exported last year 1,500,000 barrels of apples, and it is expected that in five years that figure will have risen to 3,000,000. The orchard area is being largely increased, and methods of cultivation are being improved at the same time. It would surprise many old country farmers, who still perhaps think of Canadian life as rough pioneering, to see the comfort and even luxury in farmhouses, not only in that Annapolis Valley, but in many other progressive districts scattered over all the provinces of the Dominion."

Mr. Hazen spoke of New Brunswick as offering peculiar advantages to the settler owing to its climate, its social conditions, its communications by sea and land, the very high prices obtainable for all farm products, and the fact that improved farms could be had for far less there than in the west. The fishermen were so prosperous that few probably could be tempted to enlist in the navy, but they might, perhaps, be induced to join a Naval Reserve if they were given the opportunity.

Mr. Pelletier, in the course of some remarks on the French-Canadians, stated:—"The French language is not in danger in Canada. The man who is going to abolish it has not yet been born."

Dominion Day was celebrated at sea last Monday, when a patriotic concert was held, at which all the Canadian Ministers present spoke.

TOPICS OF THE HOUR.

(Edinburgh Scotsman.)

Peculiar significance was attached to the Dominian Day banquet held in London on Monday in view of the Imperial responsibilities which Canada is prepared to shoulder in a generous spirit, and in connection with which Mr. Borden, the Premier, has come to this country. A fitting prelude to this visit was the speech delivered by Mr. Foster, the Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, who combines an intensely practical mind with a wide and generous idealism. It was to the future development and destiny of the Dominion that he directed the attention of his hearaers. In the past Canada has been able to live secure in the consciousness that Britain's Fleet and Britain's Army were ready to respond to the first call for help. But times are changed and Canada, falling into line with the other self-governing Dominions, is determined to contribute her fair share for Imperial defence. As Mr. Foster said, there are two alternative courses which may be followed. Canada may turn her power and her sentiment internally to the development within her own borders, or she may let it run in the long accustomed lines of loyal and Imperial channels. In the first of these there is a lurking peril—the peril of possible disintegration, and the certain negation of the great mission which Canada is destined to fulfil.

Speaking with the certainty of one to whom the larger Imperialism is a fundamental belief, Mr. Foster called on the eight million inhabitants of the Dominion to follow the second alternative. "Common origin, common nurture, common ideals, and the consciousness of a common destiny impel her to community of knowledge, community of council, and community of effort with the other parts of Empire." In following out her destiny along these lines, "Canada will not only make the best for herself, but will help in the general uplifting and advancement of the civilization to which she owes so much." It is as the apostle of this noble creed that Mr. Borden comes to Britain, and it is to be hoped that he will be welcomed in the same generous spirit. A policy has to be settled which will involve issues of far-reaching importance, and it is all the more gratifying to note that Canada is prepared to act up to the motto which was prominently displayed at the banquet—"We hope always to reside under the shadow of the grand old flag."

Sympathy for Regina.

For the inhabitants of Regina, the capital of the Province of Saskatchewan, which was so suddenly and terribly devastated by a cyclone, the deepest sympathy will be expressed. At least fifty of the inhabitants have perished in the disaster, and in its swift passage the storm has rendered hundreds homeless, while the whole community will feel the pinch in one way or another. The only consolation is that Regina is young and progressive and may be trusted to rally from the blow. We are told that the cyclone was as unexpected as it was destructive. Nothing like it has been hitherto experienced in Western Canada, and it is to be hoped that an isolated freak of nature, which may not recur for generations, will not outweigh the reputation for stable climate which the province has so long and rightly enjoyed.

Canning at a critical moment in the history of the Empire and of Europe, proclaimed the policy of "bringing in a New World to redress the balance of the Old." A similar opportunity promising like happy results in the safeguarding of the trade and possessions of Britain and of the general interests of peace and freedom throughout the globe, seems to be opening up for those who rule and direct British policy. It seems more than a fortunate coincidence that has timed the landing at Bristol of Mr. Borden and other Ministers of the Canadian Dominion, for the purpose of discussing with the Imperial Government the subject of the naval defence of the Empire, while the House of Lords were debating the proposed and partly accomplished "evacuation of the Metditerranean" by the British fleet. Such a conjunction cannot fail to fasten strongly the attention of the public of this country and of the Dominion on a problem, of the utmost importance to the whole Empire, which is in train to become before long urgent and critical.

In his able and moderate statement of the views of the Opposition last night—a statement which was not open to the objection that it was tainted by party spirit, or even that it was mistimed—Lord Selborne declared that "the whole future of the "independent national development of "the Empire depended on the success "of organization and co-operation in "naval matters between the self-gov"erning Dominions and the Mother "Country." The sentence focusses the two aspects of naval defence which have been simultaneously brought before the country, and its practical application is found in the statement that the Empire requires an outer and an inner guard; and that should the Colonies assume the charge, in co-operation with the Home Country, of the outer defences the Mediterranean would still remain "part of the inner guard" and of the duty of the Navy of these islands.

Will Play Her Part.

Canada is prepared to play her part in mounting guard with men and ships on the outposts of Empire. She has made this clear in the statements of her responsible Ministers; and the presence in this country of no fewer than six of these Ministers, including the Premier, is assurance that she is willing and ready to back up words by deeds. Until within the past year the position of the Dominion in relation to Imperial defence was by no means so plain. Canada, indeed, was, under the late Liberal Government, the most backward of the self-governing daughter na-
