Dear Sirs:

I have received a bill for balance of account,
$5.50. The facts are these:

About August 1st your man asked me for the job of repairing my car. After going over the car carefully, your office gave me a figure of $27.00 to cover repairing fenders and re-ducing the entire car. When I called for the car I found it had not been re-duced at all but merely simonized, which I understand is a much cheaper process. However, I paid him the price quoted, $27.00, and also paid for the new tire cover which I ordered, $6.00, or $33.00 in all. This means that I paid for a cheaper process what you had agreed to do the better process for. I told your office at the time I would pay no more. I cannot understand what your Company means quoting one price and charging much more when the work is done.

Yours very truly,

AM/E.

Arthur Meighen.
