

sible, and put a band on one leg of each. These will be the hens to breed from.

Don't hold the cockerels any longer, unless wanted for your own table.

NOVEMBER

If the pullets are laying freely, you will know that your season's work has been properly done. If they are not; well, what was the trouble? If you have kept a record of your work, that will help you to decide.

More corn may be fed now. Indeed, it may well be fed exclusively for the evening ration.

This is a fine month to sell eggs, but a poor one for dressed poultry. There should be no old fowls left to sell.

Busy hens make a full egg basket. A handful of millet scattered in the litter occasionally will be an extra inducement for the hens to scratch.

Be sure that the pullets have plenty of green food. Cabbages are not the best, for they do not add to the flavor of the egg. However, they will answer, but do not make the fowls jump for them. Mangels are better. Cut alfalfa may always be purchased of grain dealers.
