AN IMPARTIAL REVIEW OF THE REVIVAL MOVEMENT OF MESSRS. MOODY & SANKEY.

A Discourse delivered in Goswell Hall, London, on Sunday evening, May 16th, 1875.

"Dr. Sexton weighs the movement calmly, clearly, carefully. He shows, first of all, what constitutes a revival of religion, then dwells upon religious excitements, their nature, value and supposed dangers; then the agents by which religious awakenings are effected; then comes the characteristics of the present revival movement, and the cause of the success of Messrs. Moody and Sankey; and fifthly, the Doctor deals with the results of the revival upon society. The Doctor, whilst not blind to the dangers of all such movements, is strongly impressed with the opinion that Messrs. Moody and Sankey have done, and are doing, a great work. This is the best thing yet written on the movement. The Doctor seems as much at home in estimating the value of these spiritual forces as in the department of apologetics."—Rautenstall Free Press.

HISTORY'S TESTIMONY TO CHRIST:

A Sermon preached in Augustine Church, Clapham Road, on Christmas morning, 1877.

"The Rev. Dr. Thomas (editor of the Homilist), under date of December 26th, 1877, writes to us: "On Christmas morning it was my privilege to listen to a discourse in the Augustine Church by the Rev. Dr. Sexton, on "The Influence of the Advent of Christ on the Ages." As Rationalism seems everywhere on the increase, I feel it my duty to say as publicly as possible, that such a discourse, delivered in such a scholarly, argumentative, and eloquent way, in every part of the kingdom, could scarcely fail to accomplish immense good. Dr. Sexton is no novice. No man, perhaps, knows better than he the currents and eddies of Rationalism in this country, and consequently few public men are so qualified to deal with the subject in all its aspects."—Christian Age.

"A stirring and practical address, which will be highly appreciated by all who value the teaching of the Scriptures as the teachings of God's revelation and will."—Public Opinion.

THE UNION OF CHRISTIAN INTEGRITY WITH CHRISTIAN CHARITY:

A Sermon preached in the Free Christian Church, Swindon, on Sunday evening, August 4th, 1878.

"This discourse ought to be scattered over the whole land. It would prove suggestive and in many ways helpful to ministers of the gospel, and to the members of the several Christian churches. It is a calm, wise, beautiful, and timely lecture."—Rautenstall Free Press.
