

WHAT OF FUTURE OF KINRADE CASE?

of the family. That was maintained until this morning, and then all surveillance was lifted.

THEIR FUTURE MOVEMENTS.
Mr. Thomas L. Kinrade is by no means well. The awful ordeal he has gone through has aged him greatly and he suffers in addition from a severe cold he has been unable to shake off. Asked as to the future movements of the family, one of the members said:

"The end of the inquest case so unexpectedly to us that we have not had time to think of the future. It is likely, however, that Mr. Kinrade and the family will go away again, possibly to a quiet place in or near Toronto, for a complete rest and change from the scenes and worries of the past few weeks."

Mr. Thomas Holston, who, besides being the Kinrade family lawyer, is chairman of the Board of Education, stated this morning that he thought Mr. Kinrade would not resume his position of head master of Cannon street school until after the summer holidays, endeavoring in the meantime by rest and change to recuperate.

Miss Florence Kinrade, in company with Mr. Wright, visited the old home on Herkimer street this morning.

BACK TO TORONTO.
Provincial Detectives Rogers and Miller, Detective Pender, the Pinkerton man, and Jimmie Baum all went back to Toronto today. Pender and Baum will return to Portsmouth at once.

Mr. S. F. Washington, Crown attorney, did not care to say anything this morning. He denied that the inquest had ended abruptly. The Crown had simply concluded its investigation and exhausted its witnesses. There was no reason why the inquest should be kept open any longer; the investigation made could not be more thorough and complete than it was. When asked what the next move would be he said, "We can't talk about that."

"We put out the drag net," he said, "and gathered in any number of stories that held out all sorts of hope at first. When investigated they crumbled like ashes."

BAUM CAME UNWILLINGLY.
A man who knows the circumstances under which Baum came here said to the Times: "There is no doubt that Baum did not come here of his own accord. He refused an offer of $2,000 a week to play at a theatre here unless given a written guarantee from the Crown that he would not be called as a witness at the inquest. Baum was very anxious to accept the engagement, but he was determined not to attend the inquest. The Pinkerton detective succeeded in gathering a lot of information. When Baum heard of it he consulted his lawyer, who advised him to appear at the inquest and give his own evidence."

The Virginian actor showed by his attitude on the stand last night that he was there reluctantly. He volunteered no information, except that final statement, and the only questions answered with any display of eagerness were those in which he had a chance to declare that no one could say a word against Florence Kinrade.

The Crown is not expressing an opinion of what it thinks of Baum's opinion that if the police get the fellow who chased Florence Kinrade from Portsmouth they will have the murderer of Edward Kinrade, but it is known that the detectives have been working for some time on the theory that a man from the South might be able to solve the mystery. They tried hard to discover who the party was that sent the flowers to Florence at the Portsmouth Theatre, but failed.

Mr. Baum was a visitor at the Kinrade residence on Herkimer street yesterday afternoon, according to a story he told friends before leaving Hamilton. The members of the family were all there, and he had a long chat with Florence Kinrade and her father, he said. He stated that Mr. Kinrade apologized for any remarks he might have made about him at the inquest, and said that he did not intend to hurt his feelings. Jimmie also confided to friends that the papers had printed a lot of foolish stuff about his meeting in the Royal Hotel with Clair Montrose Wright. He denied the statement that he went up to Mr. Wright, announced himself, and Jimmie Baum and shook hands with him. Wright, he said, approached him in the lobby of the hotel, and they had a session that was anything but pleasant in spots.

It was expected that before the inquest closed Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith, Inspector of Hospitals, and Dr. C. K. Clarke, Superintendent of Toronto Asylums, who examined Florence Kinrade before she appeared at the inquest, and who attended every stage of the coroner's investigation, studying the faces and actions of the witnesses, would be called. It was surmised that they were confidential advisers of the Crown, but whether their presence had anything to do with anything that may yet develop, the officials refuse to say.

There is no doubt that the failure of the authorities to produce evidence at the inquest that would justify the coroner's jury in naming someone in its verdict was a disappointment to the public. The predictions made in the early stages of the case that the inquest would unravel the mystery raised hope. The people who were given a hint through the press of some big sensation to come expected it was something that would put unerringly to rest the Kinrade's slayer, and they were disappointed. The general public, however, do not realize the difficulties that beset the authorities in handling this case. They had practically nothing to go on, to begin with. The abandoning of the tramp theory the day after the crime was committed made possible many theories and suggested many lines of investigation. It is safe to say that there can be no criticism of the effort made to solve the crime, for no expense has been spared to sift it to the bottom.

CHECKERS.

The St. Catharines Checker Club have written the local Y. M. C. A. checker players to arrange for a return match on Monday evening next, and the proposal has been accepted. The Saints expect to bring eight men, and are anxious to get square with the local players for the defeat they sustained at the last meeting. The following players are requested to practice up and be on hand for the game: Weatherall, Harrison, McCoy, Cook, Wildeman, Yarrish, Digby and Best.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Champ have returned to the city and are visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Champ, Undercliffe.

—Bicycle thieves are busy again and the police have been receiving reports from several of the business offices in front of which bicycle racks are kept, complaining of the disappearance of wheels. SHERRING IS NOW A "PRO."

He Was Signed Up To-day by Montreal Manager.

To-day Billy Sherring joined the ranks of the professional foot runners. He signed up with Charles Ellsworth, a Montreal man, who has Hans Homer, Wood, Meadows, Maloney, J. D. Marsh and Hayes under contract. Sherring will be the star of the string, no doubt. Mr. Ellsworth, no doubt, made a very generous offer to Sherring, in view of the tempting propositions that the hero of Athens has turned down in the past few months—since the Marathon fever has spread over the continent. Tom Powers, the New York speed and baseball merchant, tried hard to garner Sherring for his stable, but failed. Up to a few days ago Sherring had hopes of getting a C. A. A. U. card to run in amateur races, he having been assured by some of the big guns that he would be restored to good standing in the amateur ranks. Sherring will not be sent to the races very often—he will not start in more than three or four during the spring and summer. His first race will be at Montreal on May 24th. In this he will likely hook up with most of the top notches. He is in good condition, and is running as good as he ever did, he says.

The athletic association of First Methodist Church had a meeting last night to organize for the season. The association will have two baseball teams this year, a senior and a junior. A committee was formed with power to buy the necessary equipment. The junior team has not yet been organized, but will be so at the next meeting. There will be a meeting after league on Monday night and any players wishing to join are requested to submit their names to the secretary, E. M. Chagnon.

Entrees for the Hamilton Kennel Club's spring show will close on May 6th. The secretary will be at Hennessey's drug store on Thursday evening from 7:30 to 10 to receive entries.

A Bargain is Determined.

Not by how much is paid, but by how great the value is to be had for the price. A splendid example of what real value is are these men's and young men's suits at $16, nothing better for $25 elsewhere. Ask to see our $9.98 suit values. Fralick & Co., 13 and 15 James street north.

PUGSLEY ATTACKED IN THE COMMONS.

Pugsley had been director and manager of the company.

Dr. Pugsley—That is incorrect. I was never manager.

Mr. Crothers—The judgment so states.

Dr. Pugsley—I challenge my hon. friend to find anything to that effect in the evidence.

Mr. Crothers—I don't propose to discuss the evidence.

Dr. Pugsley—I am not surprised. If my hon. friend can find anything in the evidence to justify a good many of the statements in the finding he will do more than any one else can do.

Mr. Crothers—I am not going to discuss the evidence, but the judgment of a court which is against the Minister of Public Works. If the Minister had followed the ordinary course of a man who has a judgment against him he would have appealed.

Dr. Pugsley—I have done so. After waiting for the New Brunswick Government to begin an action for the accounting of the distribution of the moneys of the company, as the Government should have done, but failed to do, I yesterday began that action myself in the Equity Court of New Brunswick.

Mr. Crothers held that Dr. Pugsley should have resigned from the Government until he had cleared himself in the courts.

At 1 o'clock Mr. Crothers was still speaking when the House adjourned for lunch.

Mr. Crothers' motion is as follows: That the unanimous findings of the commission appointed by the Government of the Province of New Brunswick set forth serious matters touching the public accounts and conduct of Mr. Pugsley, formerly a member of the Government of the said province, and now Minister of Public Works. That persons occupying high offices of state as constitutional advisers of His Excellency ought to be free from just reproach and from reasonable suspicion in respect to their public character and reputation. That to this end the said findings in so far as they impugn the public accounts or conduct of the said Hon. Mr. Pugsley deserve the serious consideration of this House, and demand such action as may be necessary to enforce virtue and proper standards of public duty.

MAPLE LEAF PARK.

The Ingersoll Construction Company has finished work on the figure eight at Maple Leaf Park and the old mill is being rushed to completion. All the amusement devices will be in proper shape by opening day and Hamilton will have one of the finest, although perhaps not the largest amusement parks in Canada.

The Thirteenth band has been engaged to play during the first week of the exposition, and the Ninety-First band will play during the second week. On Brantford day the Brantford Band will music, and on St. Catharines day the famous Nineteenth band will provide the music. It is likely that the Lieutenant-Governor will open the exposition.

Dangers of Railway Travel in China.

Railway travelling in China apparently has dangers of its own. Of late complaints have been rife as to the failure of the authorities to afford proper protection to passengers on the Shanghai-Nanking line. It appears that some irresponsible Chinaman meets with an accident through trespassing on the line or not exercising proper caution at a level crossing. It is customary for the fellow villagers to stop the train, bombard it with stones and extort compensation from the unlucky travellers, who are fortunate if they reach their journey's end with their heads unbroken. Such attacks on trains have been made for some time, and these outrages are said to be of frequent occurrence. Near thinking recently a mob hurled jagged pieces of granite, any one of which might have caused serious injury to passengers.—London Telegraph.

Dear Jumps Through Windows.

A deer chased by dogs jumped through the kitchen window at the home of Chas. H. McLaren, of South Ryegate, Vt., and leaping through another window escaped. The deer was followed by a number of men and after a long pursuit was found in an exhausted condition from the loss of blood caused by being cut by the window glass.—From Fur News.

SULTAN'S HOUSEHOLD.

Extravagance Prevailing in the Turkish Harem.

(Constantinople Correspondence London Standard.)

No department of the state has been fuller of abuses than that of the civil list. By the term itself is meant the department of the Sovereign and of certain other members of the Imperial family.

During the last thirty years this department in the interest of the Sultan and the palace camorra has been actively engaged in sweeping into its net revenues from every source whence it could steal them. Within the first month after the revolution of July last this enormous number of idle persons, amounting to 4,000,000 (Turkish) a year. This sounded very well to those who did not know the country, but on investigation it was proved that the lands and other sources which produced this and other revenues had been improperly taken from the country, the palace having no right whatever to the income in question.

Any one who has visited a Turkish palace or even the residence of a wealthy pasha, must have been struck by the enormous number of idle persons. Loafers abound. It is unnecessary to speak of imperial pipelayers, imperial light carriers, imperial cigarette box holders, but when such office holders, are each provided with an "assistant" and a long tail of attendants, and such sinecures are multiplied several times over the total cost amounts to a huge figure.

The imperial kitchens, for instance, employ some 240 cooks and 500 scullions. Twice a day they prepared about 3,000 tables, or trays, each carrying a dozen courses. Three hundred attendants, bearing the trays on their heads, distribute them throughout the palace; some of the Sultan's apartments to the harem, to the "malien" (the part of the palace containing the offices and where the Sultan carries on the business of the State), and to a host of chiefs, sheriffs and notables.

During the month of Ramadan poor people collect in thousands toward sunset and can count on obtaining "iftar," the evening meal when good Moslems medians break the fast for the day, taking their first food, water and cigarette since dawn. The waste, extravagance and peculation are beyond description.

A French cook at the palace is said to have asked for a little beef to prepare some dish for the Sultan. An ox was brought. On his protesting that he only wanted a little he was answered with a grin that what he did not require could easily be given away.

The Sultan's stables are another pretty extravagance—hundreds of horses, with an army of coachmen, grooms and attendants, all living on the fat of the land, and some of them enjoying salaries that might tempt a bank director.

The aviaries form another costly hobby. Birds collected all over the world fill cages and enclosures without number, and another huge staff of servants has the care of them; but of course the harem heads the list of heavy items.

By harem must be understood not only the Sultan's wives but all sister, daughters and relatives, with an odd thousand or so of women attendants and servants who by one pretext or another have succeeded in attaching themselves to the palace. The ladies of the palace keep very high state. Beside each, with their ladies of this and mistresses of that, as full and complicated as their lord the Sultan's. In dress and jewelry the ladies of the harem gratify extravagant tastes on which no curb is placed so long as money can be obtained by hook or crook.

Their indoor dress has been of late years generally European, and Parisian styles many a smart gown for them. In jewelry their taste runs rather toward the gaudy and ornate; rings with large diamonds and rubies, emeralds and sapphires, earrings of great weight and value but little artistic beauty result.

Their native dresses too are frequently stiff with embroidery of precious stones. Cigarette cases and holders, jewel boxes, sweet boxes, hand glasses, brushes and combs, all in massive gold or silver, roughly finished and heavily chased, but set with stones of great beauty and value, are also deemed necessary.

The most serious action of the civil list is, however, seen in the injury that it has caused not only to private individuals but to the country. Fifteen years ago men were sent around Turkey in order to hunt up desirable plots of land and to find excuses for causing them to be forfeited by the law of the country and then taken possession of on behalf of the Sultan.

The British Embassy, and probably every other embassy, has had during the last twenty years many cases before it of claims that have been made upon the property in the country belonging to British subjects.

A CHINESE STATESMAN.

Yuan Shih-K'ai Rose From Humble Origin To Be A Great Official.

When the Great Empress Dowager of China died she not only bequeathed the throne to a ruler of her own selection, but she also left in control of the various boards of government men of her own choice. Some of these were acknowledged to be among the most progressive of China's statesmen. The personnel of the Wai Wu Pu, or Board of Foreign Affairs, was especially satisfactory from a foreign standpoint, having as its active head a man of high character and high ability. Some of these were acknowledged to be a staunch friend of reform, and one upon whom China and the world could rely for sane and enlightened judgment in all Governmental affairs. This man was His Excellency, Yuan Shih-K'ai.

I asked one of the members of the diplomatic body in Peking for his opinion of the great victory, writes Eleanor F. Egan in Everybody's Magazine.

He answered me indirectly: "Governor Yuan was of humble origin, you know," he began. "He was born in the Province of Honan, that province south of the Yellow River which is almost annually flooded by that great muddy stream called 'China's Sorrow.' As a boy he studied the Chinese classics and such foreign books as had been translated into the Chinese language, but he has never studied a foreign tongue, nor visited a foreign country. And this, I think is the first element of his greatness—that, without any knowledge of foreign language, law, literature, science of government, or the history and progress of civilization, he has occupied the highest and most responsible positions in the gift of the empire, has steered the ship of state on a straight course between the shoals of conservatism on the one hand and radical reform on the other, until he has brought her near to the harbor of a safe, progressive policy."

Sea Food.

Swordfish, though little eaten, is only excelled in delicacy by the far-famed fish of the Mediterranean.

Cuttle fish (for ink) are kept on farms and milked regularly, like cows, in China.

Genuine Russian—or, more properly, Astrakhan—caviar is in globules almost as big as buckshot, and costs $5 a pint. The caviar usually seen is made from sturgeon roes, and five cents a pint would be dear for it.
