THE RUSSIAN AND KHIVA.—A Caspian correspondent of the "Moscow Gazette" says the affairs are again becoming complicated. After the defeat of the insurgents last winter, the Khan sent Ambassadors to Orenburg to express his desire to enter into friendly communications with Russia, adding that he was willing to guarantee the interests of Russian commerce and give up the prisoners. The Embassy were informed that the prisoners must be liberated before any negotiations were begun, and they consented to the demand. But since then the immediate fear of a Russian invasion being retrieved, the Khan has shown signs of a desire to trifle with the request of the Russian Government.

The Russian troops have, during the past year, occupied the Eastern coast of the Caspian Sea. A new fort, near Tchakischliat, has been built, and the forts Alexander and Krasnovodsk are kept in constant repair.

WHO WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WAR.—M. Mitchell, the well-known French journalist, makes a remarkable statement in an article published in the "Courrier de France." On the 14th of July, 1870, at noon, he met M. Paul de Cassagnac, and said to him, "I have just left Ollivier. Thanks to God! peace is assured." M. de Cassagnac replied, "My father has just left the Emperor. War is resolved upon."
