Love & Conqueror

WEDDED AT LAST.

CHAPTER XXXIX. "It's true, Miss Madge, I am a bit tired, but very little satisfied here, and then she fell back and looked around the room, as if she wondered where she was, and was bewildered. She then closed her eyes, and ever since she has remained like this, my dear, just as you see her."

Radway's Ready Relief

Radway's Ready Relief is the best remedy for all kinds of ailments, including colds, coughs, and general weakness. It is a powerful and reliable medicine that has been used for generations.

thought and heart full of the poor stranger who was so lovely and so sad. Mrs. Ford assisted her guest up the little narrow staircase, and undressed her and laid her in the soft lavender-scented bed in the little spare room. Shirley was weak enough to be helpless as a child in her strong motherly hands; and when she had drunk the hot drink Mrs. Ford prepared for her, she lay back on the pillows and slept long and heavily, awaking when the sun was high in the heavens, to partake of some tea and toast which Mrs. Ford brought to the bedside, then sinking to sleep again—the long dreamless sleep of exhaustion and prostration.

It was evening when she awoke, and she was alone in the little room. She felt stronger and better, and getting out of bed, managed with slow languid movements to dress herself and creep down stairs to the little sitting room, where Mrs. Ford greeted her with a cry of surprise. "Dear heart alive!" she exclaimed. "Are you better? How pleased Madge will be! She has been down two or three times to ask after you, and she and her ladyship will be back here on their way home."

"How can I thank you for all your kindness?" Shirley said tremulously; and she went up to the good woman and put her arms around her neck and kissed her. "La, my dear, there's nothing to thank me for," said Mrs. Ford rather unsteadily. "One as would not do to kindness for another is not fit to live in my opinion, and her ladyship and Miss Madge are that kind that they'd make one feel ashamed not to be so sometimes when occasion offers. Yes, grand as her ladyship is, she's never grand with us poor folks; and she'll be good to you if you need it."

Shirley smiled faintly; it was all part of a terrible dream, she thought. Surely she would awaken some day and find that she had been asleep a long, long time, and had dreamed that her husband was dead, and that he had been murdered, and that Guy had been tried for his life for the murder and that she had come away in the dawn, and had walked many miles to the next station, so as to avoid the chance of Guy's following her! A dream! Was it a dream? Had those long weeks in London, those bitter winter months when she had scarcely left the miserable lodging where she had taken refuge, not really existed? Had those spring days with their winds and long interminable evenings, passed only in her imagination? Ah, no—they were all realities! But that suffering was over! She had left London far behind on that July day—was it a week ago?—when she had taken a ticket for Hereford, and left the train when it stopped at a little station on the line; and then she had wandered on her way, sleeping under the blue sky under a tree of haystack, eating a bit of bread as long as her money—no shilling—lasted to procure it, and then sinking down wearily by the road side, to die, as she thought, of want of sheer hunger, of starvation. Ay, and such would have been her end had it not been for the good Samaritan who had taken her in and fed and sheltered her; and the hazel eyes went gratefully to the portly figure in a lilac print gown and snow-white apron which moved about the room on hospitable cares intent. And yet could it be possible? It must be a dream! That she who had been used to such lavish expenditure.

Nurse's Years of Experience

Proven Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Best Treatment for Kidney and Stomach Troubles. The trained nurse has even greater opportunities than the doctor himself to watch the action of medicine in specific cases. For years the writer of this letter has been recommending the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills among her patients, and is fully convinced that no treatment is so prompt and effective. This is the most valuable evidence obtainable, and we believe that all who know Mrs. Duffy will appreciate it to the full, knowing that she would not recommend anything in which she had not the fullest confidence.

who had had the command of more money than she could throw away on her whims and extravagances and pleasures, should have been brought to such want as that she should be starving, dying for the want of a bit of bread—it must be a dream; it could not be true! Three or four times she had felt the same confusion in her mind; she could not think connectedly, she could not remember the names of the villages she had passed, she could not remember her brother's address in India. She thought she might venture to write to him now and let him know where she was, and ask him if he could come to her. But what could she say to him? What address could she give him to write to her? Poor Jack, how grieved he would be if he knew how ill and solitary she was, and how—
