CHAPTER XXII.
The road between the cottage and the lodge seemed twice as long to Matthew that morning. He thought he should never reach the turning whence a sight of the gates could be obtained. At last they came within his view, and in two minutes more he had lifted the latch of Mrs. Rendal's door, and without ceremony entered her kitchen, where he found her busy with her usual household work.
"Is he here, Mrs. Rendal," he eagerly inquired.
"Is who here?" she returned in amazement.
"Maister George."
"No, Matthew—Maister George hasna been here the day."
"Alack, alack! then something has happened him," groaned Matthew, with a look of anguish.
"Happened him?" echoed Mrs. Rendal, much startled. "What gars ye think sae?"
"Because he never cam' hame last night."
"Guid Lord! Never cam' hame?"
"No, never; and neither Allie nor me kenned till half an hour syne, when I gaed into his room to waken him."
"That beats a'," said Mrs. Rendal, in utter wonder.
"Ye ken," whispered Matthew, "he was tae meet Miss Lillias last night at the aubour in the park."
"Yes," returned Mrs. Rendal, "and he did meet her."
"Hoo ken ye that? Hae ye seen Miss Lillias this mornin'?"
"No; but I hae seen aae that wis present wi' them."
"Holy poor's—the Captain?"
"No, no; but aae wha's their friend—Maister Harry."
"Maister Harry," ejaculated Matthew. "Is he here?"
"Deed is he; and noo there's nae harm in tellin' yon, Matthew, that Maister Harry and Maister George hae lang been great friends, and Maister Harry is married tae Caroline Bruce."
"No!" gasped Matthew.
"It's truth I'm tellin' ye."
"The Captain will gang mad when he kens."
"I dinna doot it; and Maister Harry is up by the house at this present time tellin' him. He stayed here a' night, and gaed awa' up after he got his breakfast. But I canna understand this about Maister George, for when they pairedt wi' him he gaed awa' tae gang straight tae your house. The summer Maister Harry kens of this the better," cried Matthew promptly. "I hinna been there for nigh hand twenty year, but this is a business that winna bide dallyin'."
Saying which, Matthew quitted the lodge, and turning to the right began to traverse the long avenue as fast as his legs and breath would allow.

The Quebec Chronicle announces the intentional retirement of Sir Francis Hincks from public life. It is the only thing he could do to save himself from utter degradation after having been driven from Renfrew, and subsequently meeting with such an overwhelming defeat in South Brant.

A Clergyman writing to a friend, says, "My voyage to Europe is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the fangs of the fiend Dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

Anemia, or depravity of blood, is a disease known by the extreme paleness or waxy appearance of the skin, lips and nails. Persons so afflicted always have dyspepsia, and are liable to hysteria, consumption, disease of the heart, convulsions, etc., consequent upon the withdrawal of material in the blood for nutrition of nerve. As Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites will supply the healthy constituents to the blood and endow it with vitality, patients need not suffer from these diseases.

BREAKFAST—EPPS'S COCOA—GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Each packet is labeled "James Epps & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epps's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).
