The Royal Visit On Saturday.

It is to be hoped London may be favored on Saturday next with fine weather during the visit of Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York. Energetic preparations are in full progress for the decoration of the city, and for the proper reception of the Royal visitors. The members of the reception committee appointed by the City Council have given days and nights to render as perfect as possible all details of arrangement. It only remains for every business man and every private citizen of London to co-operate in beautifying the city, and in contributing to the enthusiasm and interest of the occasion. London will not lag behind.

Kicking at Kitchener.

London Spectator, is making for itself a name, but it may be questioned whether it is really increasing its influence. So far it has been regarded as a well conducted fairly independent journal of the best British type. During the war it has steadily supported the Government policy, while criticising freely its administration. It made a dead set against Lord Lansdowne, and clamored for his removal. Recently the Spectator supported the view that the Liberal party had been bribed by Mr. Rhodes; and though it had to modify its statement, it did so in no graceful manner. Lord Kitchener is the last one to be attacked. It seems that he cannot think "in blocks of 10,000 miles." This kind of criticism makes one think that it would be well to send out The Spectator staff and let them settle the business, which has taxed the resources of the empire. We believe in fair criticism, especially talking about; but if there is one thing that has baffled the newspaper critics, it has been how to conduct this African campaign against the stubborn, wily foe, well acquainted with the vast territory over which they roam. Lord Kitchener made his reputation before he went to South Africa. It was based on real work, and will not easily be lost. One cannot help admiring the calm way in which he perseveres in the terrible task placed in his hands. It may be quite easy to raise a clamor against a man who, as attention of capitalists is being ata strict disciplinarian, has made havoc among the aristocratic idlers. But we may well ask whether it is wise for a giving that part of the Province a respectable journal, in the presence of | bright outlook for mine labor, and, as the enemy, and in the presence of the labor must be fed, the agriculturist world, to lend itself to that kind of | will also reap his reward. thing. When the time comes, we believe that Kitchener will give a good account of himself. In the meantime, he ought to have the sympathy and support of fair-minded men. It is not necessary to regard him as infallible; but he may really know more about the situation than The Spectator.

"The Use of Moral Ideas in Politics.

Mr. Frank Thilly, of the University of Missouri, in calling attention to a lecture by Dr. F. Paulsen, on "Parteipolitik und Moral," says: "Attention is frequently called to the fact that in this country the so-called 'better element' men of moral refinement, take no serious part in politics, but leave the affairs of city and state to 'political politicians,' who are in the business 'for revenue only.' Indeed, the term politician has almost become synonymous with dishonesty, and there are few persons even in public life who would be willing to accept the title sans phrase." This is a sad state of things, but we believe that it is improving, and that it does not apply with the same force to Canada, and still less to Britain. In Britain, of course, there is the advantage of having a cultured and leisured class, who take to politics purely as a matter of patriotism. But what has the German professor to say as to parties in politics? It may be summarized as fol-

Parties must arise where an unorganfized mass has to act as a unit, and as parties have to fight they are in danger of adopting purely war tactics and suspending the rules of morality. The principle seems to be followed that the end, the success of the party justifles the means. Within the party also there is danger, "There are two tendencies in every party, hence two groups; the doctrinaires and the opportunists. The doctrinaires strictly adhere to the principles formulated by the party; their cardinal virtues are consistency and loyalty to principle. Opportunists care not so much for principle as for power and influence. Both these tendencies have their dancontempt. Rigorous adherence to a I drew out one bound in plain, black ronte, oil painting; Edmund mbmbm makes a party lose touch with reality. Hence a party must keep the mean between these two extremes; the tact of its leaders must decide when accommodation to conditions are necessary. Men who possess this tact are the political geniuses." And yet parties are necessary, for without them public life would be impossible, and we cannot dispense with them because like all human institutions, they have their

The lecturer believes that the followng three causes have, with other things, co-operated to bring about an improvement. 1. The formation of great national states, which makes impossible conspiracies with a country's enemies, and thus robs party conflicts of their former bitterness. The monarchical constitution. A monarchy considers all parties, listens to all, but serves none. A government that has the absolute approval is no longer a monarchy, but the slave of that party. 3. The development of the historical feeling,

New Ontario Advancing.

Mr. Thomas Southworth, Director of Colonization, has recently issued his report, which furnishes some interesting statistics with regard to the progress of New Ontario. The report shows that during last year 818 colonists, with their families, comprizing altogether 2,266 people, took up land amounting to 127,494 acres. It is thought, however, that this year's returns, when completed, will show a The well-known English journal, the substantial increase over the above figures. Of the 818 locatees mentioned, 504 are from other parts of Ontario: 65 from the United States; 42 from Manitoba: 29 from Quebec, and the rest from Europe.

Rapid advances are being made in the matter of railway communication. The work on the Manitoulin and North Shore Railways is rapidly nearing completion. Sawmills are under construction, one of the best equipped sawmills on Lake Huron having been removed from Bay City, Michigan, to Blind River, Algoma. Progress is to be seen in every direction. Towns are springing up on sites that only a short time ago were covered with forest. The following excerpt from a report tells an interesting story:

now a town site, with a waterworks system, electric light system and sewerage, with connection by switch with the C. P. R. Dockage has been constructed, and a canal three miles long is being excavated to connect the mills with the Mississauga River. About the critics know what they are half a million dollars is being expended, and the mills give employment to A municipality has been organized, and the cornerstone of a new $5,000 public school laid."

A perusal of such a glowing account of New Ontario, together with the exhibit of grasses and cereals which a great many people had an opportunity to view at the various industrial exhibitions throughout the southern part of the Province, should turn the attention of intending settlers to our own land of promise, Ontario. The tracted by the resources, especially the minerals, of New Ontario, thus

Souvenir. The Advertiser has received, with the compliments of Mr. Atwell Fleming, formerly manager of The Advertiser Job Department (but now a member of the Hunter-Rose Company, of Tóronto), a copy of the "Official Programme and Souvenir" of the Royal tour, showing the progress of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York through Quebec and Ontario. The souvenir is printed on the finest paper, so that the illustrations come out in superb style. These include the King and Queen, the Duke and Duchess, the Governor-General and Lady Minto, Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, all the Provincial Premiers, and many other interesting personages, including the mayor of various Canadians cities. Among these latter is our own Mayor Rumball, who we are glad to say looks as good-looking as the best of them. The Souvenir is extremely creditable to those by whom it has been produced, and will doubtless be long retained as a memento of a most interesting occasion. Copies can be obtained from the Hunter-Rose Company, Toronto.

Emerson.

"Remembrances of Emerson" is the title of a small volume bearing the imprint of Robert G. Cooke, publisher, "The Grafton Press," 70 Fifth avenue, New York. The author is John Albee, a man who enjoyed the advantage of personal acquaintance with the subject of his sketch. The book, which contains 153 pages, is divided into three chapters, viz., A Day With Emerson; Emerson's Influence on the Young Men of His Time; Emerson as Essavist. The writer relates many instances of interest in connection with the life of Ralph Waldo Emerson. He recalls his early pleasant experiences when he began to read Emerson's "Representative Men." He says, "I remember a day when I stood idly over a gers. Unprincipled opportunism leads counter looking at the packs of what to dissolution, and brings a party into seemed to me newly published books.

Men,' attracted me, because I had just been reading 'Plutarch's Lives,' and for the first time had been aroused by the reading of any book. * * * I opened the volume at the beginning, 'Uses of Great Men,' and read a few pages, becoming more and more agitated, until I could read no more Continuing Mr. Albee says: "I would be glad to read Emerson again for the first time; I cannot re-cover the old sensation."

The author of the Remembrances goes on to relate a conversation between Emerson and Thoreau, which took place in his presence. The subject under discussion was the advantage of a college education. Emerson pleaded always for the college, while principle regardless of conditions muslin. Its title, Representative Thoreau could see no benefit to be derived from a college course. Notwithstanding the mysticism that has been connected with Emerson, an obscurity of meaning in his works, the reader is impressed with the feeling that he has come in contact with a powerful mind. Even his heterodoxy has been found invigorating.

Mr. Albee's book is what we might expect from the pen of a man of ability thoroughly acquainted with his subject. A careful perusal of the new book will turn us once more to Emerson, and what better can be said of a work of this nature? The work is scarcely in any sense a biography in the ordinary acceptance of the term. It is more an appraisal of Emerson as a man among men, and as an es-

THE DEMON, DYSPEPSIA.—In olden time it was a popular belief that demons moved invisibly through the ambient air, seeking to enter into men and trouble them. At the present day the demon, dyspepsia, is at large in the same way, seeking habitation in those who by careless or unwise living invite him. And once he enters a man it is difficult to dislodge him. THE PENNY SAVED.

We emphasize this fact about Molina Rolled Wheat .- "It saves the penny."

We don't advertise it as a cheap "bargain day" food but as a wholesome breakfast porridge made carefully from white Wheat thoroughly cleaned-all the grain but the outside bran. It saves your money because you don't have to buy pretty packages, but buy it by the pound.

Ask your grocer about getting it if he does not sell it already.
