HUNTS HAWKINS

Ex-Mayor Beck Was to Present a Horse to Department, But Has Not Yet Done So.

Some months ago it was announced that Mr. Adam Beck, who was then mayor of London, had given "Hawkins," one of his string of racehorses, kins," one of his string of racehorses, and an unsuccessful King's plater, to the chief of the fire department. Inquiry at the central fire station today elicited the information that as yet Hawkins has not been added to the brigade.

Of course, Mr. Beck is at perfect liberty to either keep "Hawkins" in his racing stable or to give him to the But the question which interests the public just now is, was the statement of the gift of the horse made merely of to secure Mr. Beck some cheap adverto secure Mr. Beck some cheap advertising? Or perhaps, "Hawkins" has taken a turn for the better, and Mr. Beck has probably repented of his impulsive gen-

MERCHANT INSULTED & BY ADAM BECK

His Unwarranted Threat Addressed to Mr. J. A. Sutherland.

Mr. Beck made two sorry exhibitions of himself at the city hall on the day of the nominations. After his assault on ex.Ald, Parnell in the ante-room, Mr. Beck went downstairs with his right bower, Mr. Gray, and as he had almost reached the Richmond street entrance he walked up to Mr. J. A. Sutherland, lumber merchant, and raising hand, said: "You are not worth licking."

At the same time Gray gave a toss of the head and remarked "We stand by our colors." Mr. Sutherland had done nothing whatever to warrant Mr. Beck's action. He was not even a spectator of the rowdyism in the ante-room.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS SLEIGH

West Nissouri Man Expires From Apoplexy While He Was Driving Home.

To find her father dead in the bot tom of his sleigh was the experience of the little daughter of William Henderson, of West Nissouri, who is wellknown in this city as a horse-dealer. Henderson, who was middle-aged came to the city yesterday morning to get a load of meal, and being unable to procure it at the mill, he went to the market, where he spent the most of the afternoon. During this time he bought a horse, and, with the animal tied to his sleigh, he started about half-past 6. He arrived at Crumlin shortly after 7, and then proceeded on his way home.

Henderson's little daughter heard the jingling of the sleigh-bells, and, running to the gate, met the team coming along slowly. At first she could not see her father, but in a minute, when the team came nearer, she saw him lying in the bottom of the sleigh. After bringing the horses into the barn she ran for her mother, and a doctor was summoned, who pronounced that ife had been extinct for some time. Ap oplexy was given as the cause of death. Henderson was well-known throughout the township and was wellliked. He was a cousin of Mr. Samue Henderson, of this city. Arrangements for the funeral have not been made as

LONDON'S STREETS ARE WRETCHED

Much Money Spent During Mr. Beck's Term, but No Good Results Achieved.

During Mr. Beck's three years in the mayor's chair, the city spent more money on its streets than ever before and yet the streets are now in the worst condition they have ever been in since London attained the dignity of a city.

What is the reason? What was the cause of this state of affairs? What was Mr. Beck's wonderful executive ability doing all these years? But perhaps Mr. Beck found it impossible to devote too much time to pavements other than those on Albert street and Richmond street north.

SCENE ON THE STREET. It has often been said that two people cannot quarrel without hurting a third; and the same is often true in the case of dogs, and was evidenced on Ridout street today. An old gentleman was going slowly along the slippery sidewalk, supporting himself with the aid of a substantial cane. At the same time two dogs, one a large Newfoundland and the other a lean, yellow cur of doubtful breed, were engaged in a tooth-and-nail encounter on the middle of the road. So absorbed were the animals in their combat, and the old gentleman in maintaining his upright posture, that neither party noticed the other. movements not being restricted by the regulation "ropes" or a referee, the been robbed of a most valuable street dogs were making all sorts of siderailway service, and property in the steps, rushes and breakaways.
