

back of her head ; she has not lost it because it was fastened with a ribbon under her chin ; all three would have lost their hair were it not that it is well fastened on and was not bought at a hairdresser's ; their eyes are bulging out of their heads ; the driver's bare feet are planted firmly against the dash-board, while with both hands he is pulling on the reins with all his might ; the girl's mouth is open and her excitement is not interfering with her curiosity as to who will win, while the small boy in the back seems to be protesting at a state of affairs which he does not understand.

Will the dog catch the rabbit, do you think ? Not if the rabbit can help it ; in any case your question can only be answered with certainty when I have seen the next picture.
