Note and Comment

The Detroit Free Press takes the Carlisle game here as the text for an editorial. The result shattered a provincial idol, it thinks. The Free Press takes for granted that the old boys were a well drilled team, and among other things says: They have believed absolutely in the superiority of two things in Canada, the kind of football they play and the kind of players of football they have. It has been a sort of fettch among them that Canadian Rugby is a much faster game than American college football, and they have professed certainty that if ever two teams from opposite sides of the boundary should come together the end of the American sport would be in sight.

The Free Press continues: The teams played both styles of the game. In the first half, under American rules, the visitors scored almost at pleasure. In the second half, under the Canadian rules.

The contract calls for the appearance of Jeannette in five contests in Australia, the first of which will be with Sam Langford and the second with Sam McVey, both of whom are now in Australia. McIntosh agrees to give Jeannette 225,000, with the privilege of 25 per cent. of the gate, with five round trip tickets for himself, manager and sparring partners, and they will sail from San Francisco the latter part of November. In addition to these stipulations, McIntosh will give a gold belt emblematic of Monday, and after an examination it. the world's heavyweight championship.

second half, under the Canadian rules, there was a brief period of uncertainty, according to the newspapers, but the Indians speedily grasped the essential points and adapted themselves to the strange system with an ease that was in marked contrast to the inability of the Canadian players to master the novelties of the sport to which they were new. Thereafter the Indians outplayed the Torontonians at their own game.

Comparing the two games The Free Press believes the American style develops alertness and quickness to learn much better than the Canadian style. It resembles baseball as compared with cricket in this respect. The boyf trained on the diamond will make a much better showing at the wickets than will the boy from the crease make when he essays the swifter sport.

Jack Williams is the only man to take his place, and as Williams has been showing very little in the line of good work this season, Dr. Galwin is very much worried over his team. Nearly every play hinged upon Gerrard and his work this season has been exceptional.
