ROYAL DECLARATION BILL.

Speech by the Marquis of Salisbury on Its Third Reading in the House of Lords.

HIS LORDSHIP'S PROTESTANTISM

Dissatisfaction of the Roman Catholics, Who Wished for Their Right of Succession to be Recognized.

The debate in the House of Lords on the third reading of the Royal Declaration Bill was interesting. A summary follows:

The Marquis of Salisbury moved the third reading of the bill.

Lord Braye said that the declaration was infinitely better than the statute, but it seemed a pity when they had an opportunity of altering the statute that they did not alter it in a way that would be acceptable to all parties. The short title of the Bill—Royal Declaration—was misleading, as this was not a declaration, but a solemn oath. There was a great deal of irony in connection with this bill. In the first place, at the same time that the measure came before them, there was on the table the Royal Titles Bill, which contained the title of Defender of the Faith, given by Leo X. to Henry VIII., who had written a learned treatice to defend that very faith which the Sovereign was now called upon to declare idolatrous and superstitious. The noble Marquis, when referring to the doctrine of the transubstantiation, had lowered his voice and inclined his head, and had spoken in a deeply reverential spirit.

The Marquis of Salisbury: The noble Lord says I lowered my voice and inclined my head. He is quite mistaken, I deny that.

Lord Braye said that at all events the reverened tone adopted by the Marquis on that occasion would be appreciated, for other attitudes of the most hostile and irreverent character had existed, even among those in high authority.

The Marquis of Salisbury: The description the noble Lord has given of me that I lowered my head and lowered my voice is an imputation which should not have been made.

Lord Braye: I did not mean that the noble Marquis bowed his head at the mention of transubstantiation. I meant that he spoke reverentially of the whole matter—that he alluded to the subject as sacred, tho demurring to enter into it on theological grounds. That is what I wanted to convey.

The Marquis of Salisbury: This is a matter I had better not pursue, but I must say that I cannot accept that history of the noble Lord in several respects, certainly not in the view that the Sovereign of the country bears the title Defender of the Faith in obedience to a decree of Leo X., who gave it to him. The noble Lord has omitted to mention another important fact—namely, that Leo X. withdrew it, and that the title was subsequently conferred by a much more accepted authority—that is to say, the British Parliament under statute. I only wish to correct what I believe is a mistake in the history of the noble Lord. I do not wish to enter upon matters which have been dealt with by successive speakers. If we have not by our arguments on the second reading succeeded in convincing those whom we addressed, I do not think that we shall succeed in the attempt now. The burden of all the arguments which we have heard addressed against that language, which is the language of the present statute and which would be the language also of the new statute if we passed it, is that they persisted in saying that we are making a new Declaration. We had no intention of making a new Declaration, and with no fairness can it be said that we have done so. Because I produce a picture and propose to clean it, I am not exposed to the censure which may be deserved by the original painter, nor am I liable for the errors which he may have committed. I am compelled to admit that it may be my fault more than theirs, but the attitude of the organs of Roman Catholic opinion and of the Roman Catholic Peers of this House and of those who have addressed us from outside appears to have modified considerably as the debate went on. At first we certainly understood—but we understood that the Roman Catholics would look upon it as an advantage and a favor from Parliament if these offensive words were withdrawn from the Declaration. Since that time we have learnt that they would rather perpetuate the offensive words unless we would consent to grant them something else, which we never indicated the slightest intention of asking them to accept. It was unfortunate, I think, because it has created unnecessary bitterness. We know that they do not wish these offensive words to be withdrawn unless at the same time there is withdrawn that declaration for the security of the Protestant succession which we never for a single moment indicated we had any intention of dispensing with. I am sorry that misunderstanding has taken place, but I confess I was not aware how completely it had taken place until I heard the speech of my noble and learned friend (Lord Llandaff) on Friday night. He is such a distinguished and eloquent representative of the Church to which he belongs that anything he says must undoubtedly come with the greatest weight, and will be held to carry the sanction of many men besides himself. It is a brief report, but I think it sufficiently conveys the purport of his meaning, and it is well that it should be quoted in order that due emphasis may be given to it. The report says: "He preferred the retention of the language of the Bill of Rights in its naked offensiveness to putting into the Sovereign's mouth in this 20th century a controversial statement directed against a religion which could now be exercised by His Majesty's subjects without the slightest blame or reproach." I do not cavil at that expression of opinion on the part of my noble and learned friend. I have no doubt that it was spoken with all the earnestness of his own convictions. But, of course, what it meant—and that I do not think we quite understood when we began this discussion—was the offensive words should be left if the declaration against the Roman Catholic religion was retained. That is an important stage we have arrived at. We cannot say that it is satisfactory, and when I am asked by my noble friend, who introduced this matter, whether I am prepared to prophesy the passage of this Bill, I confess that when I heard my noble and learned friend I felt that the prospects had received a slight, at all events, and not a favorable modification. Next morning, when I opened the newspapers and saw the attitude of my noble and learned friend's co-religionists in the other House, I confess the prospect was less hopeful still. I much regret if this Bill should not succeed. Many of those who have taken part have argued as tho it was a question between this Bill and some other imaginary Bill which they told us was free in the eyes of all men from any objection. Some noble Lords appear to have taken the view that it was possible for us to devise a measure which should meet with objection from nobody. I only wish that they would put that formula on the table. I do not think that anything of the kind exists. But, be that as it may, I fear that the result is of a totally different kind. It is not now a question whether you will have this change or that change. We know sufficient of the opinions of those whose voices are powerful in this matter to know that outside the Bill which we are now passing there is no alternative, and that having no alternative of change what you are doing by rejecting this Bill is laying down that the Declaration shall remain in the words in which it has been expressed for more than two centuries. (Hear, hear.) I am sorry that it should be so, but do not let it be said that it is our own doing that that Declaration is maintained. If the Roman Catholics had willed it, if they had been consenting parties and not active opponents, I think that there was a very fair chance of removing what I admit to be a stain on the statute book. What the present state of things is your Lordships will judge for yourselves, but I cannot feel that, whatever happens, Roman Catholics have a right to complain of any grievance in what we have done.

Viscount Llandaff said that he no doubt substantially expressed the opinion which the noble Marquis had quoted, and the reason for that opinion was obvious. If the Roman Catholics assented to a new Declaration inserted in the Bill passed in the year 1901, alluding to and condemning doctrines which they held to be sacred, they should be consenting to what they regarded as a most invidious exception made against them on the solemn occasion of a Royal accession. They were dissatisfied with the language of the present Bill, not because they loved the offensive language of the Bill of Rights. He was confident that the offensive vulgarity of the original Decaration woud at last so shock and disgust all sober-minded men in the country that there would be a prospect of doing away with it, whilst there would be no prospect of which they consented to put with the Bill of 1901. He would vote against the third reading.

Lord Spencer said that he shared the regret of Lord Salisbury that the Roman Catholics had not accepted the modified Declaration of the Bill. The feeling of the country was profound and strong on the Protestant succession, and there were such exaggerated views of what the old Declaration meant that it would be perfectly futile for even the present Government, with all their strength, to have proposed a material akeration in the Declaration. He feared that if the Bill was not accepted they would for a long time have to remain with the old Declaration of the Bill of Rights. He felt they could obtain all they desired if they could obtain the Bill, and he therefore regretted the loss of the Bill.

The Bill was read a third time.

ADMIRALTY OVER HASTY.

London, Aug. 26.—The report issued by the Admiralty regarding the boiler testing race between the British cruiser Hyacinthe, fitted with water-tube boilers, and the cruiser Minerva, having cylindrical or Scotch boilers, is the theme of extensive comment. It is generally admitted that the contest was not under conditions that would enable the formation of a decisive opinion. Considerable doubt is again thrown upon the supposed superiority of the Belleville boiler. It is urged that even if the superiority of it should be established the delicacy of mechanism accompanying the Belleville creates a liability to serious derangement. On the whole the press considers that the Admiralty are over hasty in adopting the Belleville boiler without further experiments of an exhaustive character.

MAIL COLLECTOR LOCKED UP

And the Keys for Street Boxes Were Unavailable for Several Hours.

SEVERAL ARRESTS FOR THEFT

Five Employes of the Lawry Packing Company in Custody—Likely Parliamentary Candidates.

Hamilton, Aug. 25.—James Moran, collector of mail, was arrested last night on a charge of drunkenness and disorderliness. When the time came to-night for him to go on his route, he pleaded to be released. The police wouldn't allow him out, however, and after a lot of red tape the postal authorities were notified. The keys for the street boxes were at the police station till 8.30.

Police Points.

Maude Marlotte, a pretty young girl of 16 summers, is under arrest on three charges of robbery. She was arrested at the home of her stepfather in Dundas yesterday by Acting Detective Miller. It is alleged the girl has been masquerading here for some time as a daughter of Lawyer Parks of Toronto. She arranged to board at several places, but only stayed a few hours—just long enough to steal something. She is alleged to have taken parasols, brooches and wearing apparel. The complainants in the cases are Mrs. M. Scully, Mrs. Mary Higgins and Mrs. Lulu Winter.

William Gerger, the King-street baker, was arrested again last night on a charge of threatening to kill his wife.

George Sharvel, 440 West King-street, is also in the cells, charged with threatening to kill his wife.

Richard Phillips, Queen-street, was arrested last night for being drunk and driving furiously in Dundurn Park. He nearly ran down the City Solicitor.

Alleged Robbers Arrested.

Early yesterday morning the police arrested five men, who, it is alleged, have been systematically robbing the Lawry Packing Company.

Their names are: Arthur Clark, foreman at the firm's stalls in the Market Hall; Alex. Keefer and E. Lambert, shippers at the packing house; Robert McBride, a driver of one of the delivery wagons; Arthur Cope, a butcher, who has a stall on the Central Market. The first four are charged with stealing lard, cheese and hams within the past week, and Cope is charged with receiving stolen property.

The men were arrested at the instance of A. Noble of the Dominion Detective Agency, Toronto. Noble and another detective have been working on the case for weeks. The former was engaged ostensibly as a clerk in the stall. It is alleged hundreds of dollars' worth of stuff have been stolen within a month, and the firm suspects that it has been robbed for over a year.

The prisoners were arraigned before Magistrate Jelfs yesterday. All pleaded not guilty and declined to elect. The examination was set for Tuesday.

Likely Candidates.

Dr. H. S. Griffin is spoken of as a likely candidate for the Liberals to put up against Henry Carscallen, K.C., M.L.A., in East Hamilton division for the Ontario Legislature.

J. V. Teetzel, K.C., is being strongly pressed to stand for West Hamilton. The Conservatives, it is said, will likely offer the nomination to Mayor Hendrie.

Minor Mention.

Scores in the City Baseball League yesterday were: Woodlands 7, St. Patricks 6, (12 innings); Park Nine 14, Twentieth Century 14, game called at 10th innings on account of darkness.

The Hamilton Cricket Club defeated the Grimsby eleven here yesterday by a score of 63 to 54.

The K.O.T.M. and the Juvenile Foresters held picnics at Sherman's Park yesterday afternoon.

The old Star Theatre will be re-opened to-morrow night as a family theatre.

Mrs. J. Dickenson of Albert-road fell in her yard to-night and broke her leg. She was taken to the General Hospital.

Ernest Long, Clappison's Corners, had his wheel stolen last night.

Early this morning a gasoline stove in the residence of D. C. James, 61 Magill-street, exploded, setting fire to the house. About $100 damage was done.

Edward Malcolmson, known as "Buffalo Red," was arrested to-night by P. C. English. He has been wanted for over a year in connection with the third main plugging.

SUBJECT TO NERVOUS JOLTS.

Rev. Dr. Williams of Montreal Tells of Other Seizures That Took Rev. Mr. Sanderson.

BUT A GENTLEMAN ABOVE SUSPICION

Several Times He Has Been Accused of Drunkenness, but It Was Merely Sickness.

Montreal Witness: The Rev. Dr. Williams, senior pastor of St. James' Methodist Church, this city, on being made acquainted with the statements contained in the Syracuse despatch, made these statements, which he believes will explain the unfortunate occurrence:

He knows both of the ministers referred to intimately, and he gives no credence to the parts of the story which reflect on their characters. He considers both gentlemen above suspicion. The Rev. David Cook Sanderson was a colleague of the Rev. Dr. Williams in 1877, and at that time was subject to nervous attacks bordering on hysteria.

He has seen him act in a manner that might lead one to believe he was drunk. Once, while on a Sunday school excursion, an official of the church drew Dr. Williams' attention to Mr. Sanderson, and on going where he was the doctor found his colleague suffering from severe hysteria and crying. He was taken to the captain's cabin at 10 o'clock in the morning and remained there till ten at night, when he was still so weak that he required assistance to reach home. The incident was widely known and all understood the trouble to be of a nervous origin.

He had several similar attacks afterwards and has been, more than once, accused of being drunk on account of his peculiar actions, tho he never tampers with either liquor or tobacco. One similar incident is remembered when Mr. Sanderson was stationed at Centenary Church, Point St. Charles. On one occasion Mr. Sanderson wandered away to the east of the city and sat for hours at night in one of the parks. The story was circulated at that time that he was drunk, but as a matter of fact it was only a case of nervous trouble.

As to the details of the present case, Dr. Williams could say nothing, not being aware of the actual facts. As there is no charge against the Rev. Mr. McAmmond, he has nothing particular to say regarding his connection with the case, except that he was probably looking after his friend. Mr. McAmmond was pastor of the East End Methodist Church when Mr. Sanderson was at Point St. Charles.

FAILED TO SWIM THE CHANNEL.

Holbein Taken From the Water 5 Miles From English Shore.

Dover, Eng., Aug. 25.—Mr. Holbein, who yesterday started from Cape Gris-Nez (between Boulogne-Sur-Mer and Calais) in an attempt to swim to Dover, narrowly escaped drowning. He covered the course to a point within five miles of Dover, and then collapsed, after having been in the water 12 hour and 46 minutes. Holbein's exploit was very remarkable considering the roughness of the seas, and has established a record.

Instructions to Holbein were shouted thru a megaphone and powerful acetylene lamps were lighted to guide him. At the end of the six hour he was swimming well, but began to complain of an injury to his left hip, sustained on the rocks at Cape Gris Nez, but not mentioned before. At this time he was six miles off the British coast. He continued to swim well, mainly on his back. After 11 o'clock he was once lost for five minutes, a big wave having swept over him. He kept going steadily, but during the tenth and eleventh hours a westerly tide drifted him much out of his course, and it was evident that the heavy seas were having a bad effect. During the twelfth hour his stroke weakened considerably. He was swimming with breast low in the water and head much down. He was making almost no progress and seemed unable to grasp the directions given him.

Twice he turned completely around, making for the French shore. At 4.20 a.m. a council was held on the tug and it was decided to take him out of the water. He was turning like a top and hopelessly blind. If he had been left longer he must have done down.

Allowing for his zigzag course it is estimated that Holbein swam 26 miles, when taken from the water Dover was about five miles north northeast.

He promises to make his next attempt next year.

READING CAMP MOVEMENT

A Plan to Furnish Literature to the Lumbermen and Miners in the Camps

BY WAY OF TRAVELING LIBRARIES

Presbyterian Clergyman is Promoting the Movement, Which is Widely Endorsed.

Rev. A. Fitzpatrick of Nairn Centre, Algoma, a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, who for over a year has been devoting all his time to the working-out of a home-study system of elementary education for isolated laborers, visited Toronto on Saturday in the interest of his work.

The Reading Camp movement is endorsed on all hands. It is entirely undenominational. A few days ago the Dominion Educational Association, in a unanimous resolution, urged provincial governments, with the co-operation of the publics, to provide not only traveling libraries for these reading rooms, but also elementary instruction for those who cannot at present avail themselves of such privileges. The action of employers in mines, railroad construction camps and lumbering operations generally, in taking the initiative in this work, was cordially commended.

Thirty-Five Camps This Fall.

Thirty-five reading camps will be open this fall. Lumbermen alone will invest about $5000 in buildings, largely in this province, to say nothing of what employers in mines are doing in the way of building club and reading rooms.

The kind of literature to be sent to these reading camps will be clean and healthful, and not sectarian or pronouncedly religious. An effort is being made to avoid literature that would give offence to the religious convictions of any.

A considerable portion of these books will be interesting stories of an elementary character; and an effort will be made to encourage those who can neither read nor write to learn.

The reading rooms will be open to clergymen of all denominations alike.

Public Asked to Help.

The public is asked to co-operate in this work. About $2000 additional is needed to carry it on successfully this season. It is capable of indefinite expansion.

Mr. W. J. Bell, lumberman, of Cartier, Algoma, is treasurer for the movement, and all subscriptions should be forwarded to him.

The provincial grant of $1200 for the establishment of a system of traveling libraries was too small, and the Department of Education is unable to supply the demand. Mr. E. A. Hardy, B.A., of Lindsay, a graduate of Toronto University, who has special qualifications for work of this kind, has undertaken to supplement the government libraries. It is hoped that the public will give him its hearty assistance in the way of contributing suitable books and money for this special purpose.

ELEPHANT ON STREET CAR.

Passengers Hastily Give Up Their Seats and Clamber Out.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Three small elephants belonging to a trained animal exhibition which is showing in Indiana-avenue were to-day taken from their tent for a morning constitutional, when the clownish member of the trio, with ears flapping and proboscis working like a pendulum, ambled from the side of the street to the car tracks, where he stopped and trumpeted.

"Get 'im off! Get 'im off!" shouted the motorman to the colored attendant. Repeated ringing of the gong failed to serve as a warning to the brute, and the motorman stopped the car.

In the meantime Pinto, a performer of no mean ability, poked his trunk into the car before the front seat and, climbing up, wedged his pudgy sides between the seat and the front rail. Excitement following this move was increased when men and women clambered from the car.

Vigorous prodding by the attendant soon rid the car of its pachydermatous patron.

LEGLESS MAN NOT SLOW.

Elopes With Another Man's Wife, and Then Defies Pursuit.

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 24.—Owen Stickney of Corfu, near Rochester, has eloped with the sixteen-year-old wife of B. H. Green of Akron, N.Y. Stickney has no legs. They were both amputated above the knees years ago. Stickney deserted his own wife and several children. Green, the deserted husband, put a detective on the trail of the erring couple. The detective traced them to Youngstown, Ohio, but there lost trace of them. To-day Stickney's mother received a letter from him, postmarked Sandusky, Ohio. Stickney wrote:

"I told them if I had six hours' start they could not catch us, even if I haven't any legs, and a steam engine couldn't take Eva away from me now. Write us at Wheeling, W. Va."

SHE'S A MALTESE CAT

Strange Hallucination of Sick Woman Who Was Using Malted Milk.

Steubenville, Ohio, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Rebecca Tipton of Unionport has become insane with the strangest hallucination on record in the Probate Court and due to reasons that are unique. While run down physically and sick she was advised to use malted milk. The word "malted" in some way suggested to her that she was a Maltese cat, and she began from that time on to lap up milk or other food given her like a cat, and she tells everybody she is a Maltese cat. She is to be sent to the State Hospital at Columbus. The examining physician pronounces it the strangest case he has ever seen.

CANADIAN NORTHERN ROADS.

Montreal, Aug. 24.—It appears that an important meeting was held in New York the other day, when it was decided to issue the Canadian Northern Railway bonds at the end of next week or the first of October. Your correspondent learns that the full issue of $4,040,000 has been underwritten in New York, Boston and Chicago at 87½. The earnings of the road so far have been about $40,000 per week.
