We have an overcoat that is a real storm defier. Enveloped in this you may encounter a blizzard and feel as warm as if you were in South Africa.

Now-a-days we have the knack of making these coats warm without the weight that we formerly put into them.

They are also lighter in price. $3.00 or $4.00 buys a first-class coat.

WITH GEN. PLUMER'S FORCE

Interesting Story from a Trooper of the Rhodesian Regiment at Fort Tuli.

THEY HAD A MOST EXCITING TIME.

People at the Fort Thought They Had Been Wiped Out—By Fire Was Terrified.

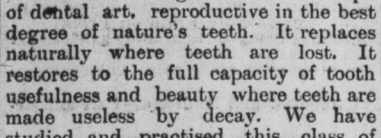

The following letter, containing an account of fighting on the Rhodesian frontier, has been received from a trooper in the Rhodesian Regiment. The writer, who is a barrister, and a member of a Chelsea Rifles, joined Col. Plumer's force upon the outbreak of the war:

Fort Tuli, South Africa, Nov. 9 '99. I've had a bit of an exciting time since I last wrote—most too exciting at one time. Last time I wrote was when we were leaving Tuli for Rhodes' Drift. We arrived there all right after much marching and counter-marching—mostly by night.

The second night of it, for the small portion we had for sleep I struck a guard so by the third night I was in a wretched state from want of sleep. I was always dropping off to sleep on my horse and suddenly waking up. Moreover, I began to see all sorts of strange things. Brooks and trees were transformed into houses and gardens, and then I would come to with a start and pinch myself and try to keep awake—a very unpleasant experience. When we reached Rhodes' Drift our squadron was quartered there alone, and we had a couple of brushes with the enemy to start with.

We missed the First Brush. I missed the first, which we had much the best of it. We only had one man hit, and that only slightly, and in return we bowled over a couple of the enemy's men, who may have been wounded, stamped their horses, rode 100 in number (two surprised their grazing guards, killed one of the horses and jumped seven. The next night we were in a bush, and there was a fight was warm for a bit. We cut only the second squadron—about 50 men—who were recommitting round the enemy's fort, dismounted. This was only three, but they were our camp, and in British territory. We had four men wounded and an equal amount of damage to them. If not more. We got off very cheap, for their fire was very hot, and very close, too. The third fight came off on Nov. 2, and that was a scorching one. The night before I was on guard, it was a beastly night, raining and blowing hard, so I got very little sleep when it was my turn off. In the morning I was in my tent, grazing guard with three other men.

The Dutch Started Firing. About 1 o'clock I got orders to bring in A Tooth-Saving Grace.

HAMBURG'S DEBUT IN TORONTO.

The metropolitan critics have stated that Mark Hamblong is creating the same type of interest in America. His American debut was made at such a high level, and the critics go so far as to say that Hamblong is not only going to be an equal footing with Paderewski, but that he is the best pianist of the twentieth century.
