THE LOAF OF BREAD

Two Sides of The Question of Price—Cent Likely to Stay on Till November, Says One

Exception has been taken by some of the city bakers to the suggestion made in the Times this morning that different decreases in the cost of flour, and the apparently certain tendency of the wheat market to go lower, there should be a lopping off of the extra cent a loaf placed on bread since the outbreak of war. Speaking to a Times reporter a representative of the largest bakeries in the city said that he did not think the bakers could afford, in the interests of their business, to reduce the cost of bread to the consumer until November at least. When the war broke out last fall, he said, the bakers had resolved not to take advantage of the rising price of wheat to increase the cost of bread, though they might easily have done so, by passing themselves on the ground that the price of wheat had risen. At that time it was thought by many that it would reach $10 a barrel. They had not, and bread at the lower rate for some six months when, by virtue of having to make new contracts with the millers, they were forced to raise the cost of a loaf to nine cents. At the present time they were unable to take advantage of the falling market because of having had to contract for their supply with the millers some months ago before there were indications of a break in the price. Most of them had contracts which run for some weeks longer at rates which would not compare with the decreased quotations now, and they would be losing money if they sold at a reduced rate. The same baker quoted the cost of bread in Montreal, Toronto, and Winnipeg as even higher than it now is here.

They say, further, that no matter how much of a variation, upwards or downwards, there is to the flour market, they are unable to gain by it, as they are not continually changing the price of bread, whereas the wholesaler is able to follow the turn of the market and benefit accordingly.

This is the argument of the bakers, or some of them at least. There are some persons, on the other hand, who claim to have a knowledge of the flour trade, and they say that there is no reason why the extra copper should not come off the cost of loaf of bread. They argue that when the flour market struck the up-hill grade last fall and climbed by rapid strides, the city bakers were for the most part well protected for they had large quantities in storage and also had contracts which would give them the benefit of the old quotations for some months, so that in selling bread to the trade at eight cents a loaf, while they did for six months nothing, except the chance to take advantage of the advanced flour market. It is further argued that the bakers get better prices from the millers than the wholesalers do, and that today they are buying, and have been for some time, at quotations which are as advantageous as those given with the recent decreases. The bakers say that this is not so, that they are paying more for their flour today than the prevailing stock quotations.

Regardless of whether the bakers are right or whether their critics are right, it is believed by those who watch the wheat market that before long flour must go lower—in fact there are dealers in the city who predict that next week will see a still further decrease. The increased acreage in the west is partly responsible, aided by a good crop, encouraging harvest conditions, and the unloading of the old wheat.

DEMOLISHING THE SUSPENSION BRIDGE

Well to Have Boat Ready in Case of Accident

The work of demolishing the old Suspension Bridge is going along rapidly. Contractor McVey has about twenty men employed, including six or eight experienced bridge men, who do the more hazardous work. There is now quite an open space in the centre, and the floor on both ends is considerably raised, and this will be more noticeable as more woodwork is taken away. Even when the new bridge was being constructed, the work did not appear more dangerous than in removal. As the crosspieces are loosened, a block and tackle is used to haul them up to the bridge, and from there everything is carried to the rear. Occasionally a deal or board drops to the water and the unusual splash gives the spectators a thrill.

The absence of a boat under the bridge in case of accidents was pointed out today by one interested. Of course this could be used only in certain tides, but the precaution was deemed necessary during the building of the new bridge, and without any facilities for getting at it quickly, he would have little chance now should he lose his grip or make a mistake from the old suspension.

SEPTEMBER WEDDINGS

Ewing-Parker

A wedding of interest to many friends in St. John was solemnized on Sept. 1 at Tyngemouth, when Miss Frances J. Tilton, fourth daughter of Leonard Parker, became the bride of William Colin Ewing, son of W. A. Ewing, K.C. of this city, Rev. Ferdinand LeRoy, rector of Trinity church, St. Martins, officiated. Only relatives and immediate friends were present. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her father. She was prettily dressed in white duchesse satin and real lace, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. Robert Thompson.

Spiny-Ornduff

A pretty nuptial event took place at 8.30 o'clock on last Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Theodore E. Ornduff, 45 Albert street, when her daughter, Miss Lilla Hazel, was united in marriage to Stephen Spiny of the local police. Rev. Dr. Hutchinson officiated. To the strains of Lohengrin, the wedding march was played by Mrs. Roy Mitchell, cousin of the bride, the bride entered the parlor wearing a gown of her own design, designed by Theodore Shaw, who gave her in marriage. The ceremony was witnessed by relatives and friends of the young people.

The bride was attired in white pallid silk, with lace and crystal trimmings, and bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses and maiden-hair fern. Little Miss Maude MacLean made a very dainty flower girl, attired in white with pink trimmings.

The groom's present to the bride was a purse of money, and to the little flower girl a gold signet ring. A large number of beautiful and valuable presents, including money, silver, cut glass and china evidenced the popularity of the bride. After the ceremony a dainty repast was served.

The out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Fred Spiny, of Masquash, mother of the groom; Miss Alice Ornduff, of Boston; Miss Linda M. White, of The Narrows, Queens county, and Mrs. Fred Ornduff, of Mill Cove, Queens county. After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Spiny will reside at 48 Albert street.

Youngblood-Nason

Tracy Station, Sumbury County, Sept. 1—A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of David F. Nason, 24 Willow avenue, when his daughter Ethel Linda was united in marriage to Walter Youngblood of Milo, Maine. Rev. James C. DeLaurier officiated.

The bride was charmingly attired in white crepe du chene and carried a shower bouquet of lilacs, the valley, Viva Lenora, as maid of honor, attired in white shot silk and carrying a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served. The bride received many fine presents among which were cut glass and silverware, showing the popularity in which the bride and groom are held among a large circle of friends at Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. Youngblood will remain in the home of the bride's father at Tracy until September 20th after which they will reside at 35 Clinton street, Milo.
