SOLDIERS' LETTERS

Mrs. David A. Daley, Adelaide street, has received a letter from her son Hollis, who is in the Army Service Corps with the first Canadian overseas contingent at Salisbury Plain. He enclosed in the letter ten dollars with which he desires her to procure a Christmas gift for herself. He said that he was well and expected to enjoy Christmas in one of the big cities with a young Englishman. He expected that the Canadians would go to the front soon after the New Year, and said that they would all welcome such a move.

He also sent his best wishes to all his friends, but regretted that he could not have the pleasure of spending Christmas with them and then returning to his post.

In a letter from Private Robert E. Taylor at Salisbury Plain to W. B. McRae, 173 Erin street, he expressed his wish to be remembered to his many friends in St. John, extending to all of them the compliments of the season. He also sends home some very interesting and encouraging reports of the life and daily routine of the soldiers who are all anxiously awaiting for the moment when they will be sent to the front for real action where, he says, the boys from the winterport town may be depended upon to give a good account of themselves in efficiency as well as valor.

Private Frederick Rolston also wishes to be remembered to his friends and former associates in the employ of R. P. & W. F. Starr.

THE HOLIDAY IN FAIRVILLE

Ten and Twelve Below and Worse This Morning—Fine Gift to Methodist Church

Yesterday was observed very quietly in Fairville, in fact there was very little encouragement for outdoor celebration as the thermometer registered ten and twelve below. In the morning several churches held the usual Christmas services. In the Methodist church a pleasing incident occurred when the pastor, Rev. Gilbert Earle, announced that a member of the congregation, W. E. Earle of Lancaster Heights, had presented as a gift to the church and congregation the wiring and installation of electric lights in the parsonage. Work will be commenced immediately and will likely be finished in a few days, and should prove a very acceptable improvement.

Many took advantage of the good sleighing in the afternoon for a spin over the road and large numbers visited the moving picture theatres.

This morning Jack Frost took another tumble, registering two and four ten degrees below in various places while at the C. P. R. station ten was announced. Crossing the bridge proved a bitterly cold experience and several had their cars nipped on the trip. One young man referred to the car on the city side of the bridge as pretty cold storage on such a day and another said something should be done to better the heating facilities.

Pretty cold in the centre of the bridge and it is answered the conductor, the next thing you people will be asking the St. railway is why they ain't got a stove set up there to warm the stumps. This really caused some amusement.

The Man In The Street

Well, it's over! Old Santa wasn't sidetracked in Belgium after all.

And the war went on, even though the censors did take the holiday. Did you miss the news from the front?

One reason why today feels like Monday may be that yesterday felt considerably like Sunday, except when the kids were around.

This cold snap shows how really useful those new street cars could be for summer service.

This might be a good day to advertise indigestion remedies.

Cold turkey for lunch today?

The exchange of courtesy between the warring nations on the battlefields yesterday was but the preliminary intimation of the allies' intention to make an informal call at Berlin as early a date as possible.

It was late on Christmas eve when a householder found it necessary to ascend to his roof for some reason or other apparent to the man in the street. A bearded citizen carrying more than one kind of a "package" caught sight of the figure among the chimney tops, and stopped and stood in an unsteady fashion while he studied the situation. At last he gave his verdict:

"Santa Claus, I live, and, by jimminy, he's shaved off his whiskers."

The Right Spirit

They're all nice girls, stenographers, bookkeepers, and collectors, and you couldn't help but like them. They number eight. For some years they have been in the habit of exchanging Christmas gifts among themselves, pretty little remembrances to show how popular each was with the other. This year, however, they heard the call of lonely little voices crying from out a dingy tenement what they would like to get for Christmas. The girls knew the little ones would not get the boots, and clothes, and fruit, and candy, and toys which each had said he or she would like to get, so immediately came a happy thought: "Why not let us give to these poor little kiddies rather than among ourselves?" The sequel was noted on Christmas eve when two of the young stenogs arrived at the home of the youngsters whose Christmas might otherwise have been so cheerless and cold, and brought an endless variety of packages, all purchased from the sums which the eight would otherwise have paid for personal gifts. It was a kindly, thoughtful act, and while the youngsters whose hearts were so gladdened appreciated it to the utmost, the eight young women were even happier in the knowledge that they had laid a burden of lonely longing from several youthful hearts.

TRIMMING CHRISTMAS TREE, IS BURNED

Percy Robb, of East St. John, met with a painful accident Christmas Eve. He was badly burned about the hands. He was trimming a tree and it caught fire. In an endeavor to extinguish the blaze, he was quite badly burned. He went to the Hospital, where he had the injuries attended to.

NORTH END ROBBERY

A robbery took place between six and seven o'clock last evening, when the drug store of G. T. Morgan, Main street, was broken into and candy and cigars stolen. The thief or thieves forced an entrance through a side door and then made their get-away with several dollars worth of goods. The guilty parties evidently were well acquainted with the surroundings, and also the movements of the proprietor, who had locked up only at 6 o'clock. When he returned a little later he found that his place of business had been broken into and several articles missing.

FUNERALS

The funeral of LeBaron B. Thompson took place this afternoon from the residence of F. H. Burr, Rockland road. Burial services were conducted by Rev. G. A. Kubring, and interment took place in Cedar Hill. The funeral cortege was long and impressive and testified to the esteem in which Mr. Thompson was held. A large number of floral tributes were received. Among them were those from the employees of the Eastern Steamship Corporation in this city; a wreath from the employees of the Boston Steamship office, a crescent Luxor Temple, Mystic Shriners, and a large number of other pieces from friends.

From her late residence, 20 Cliff street, the funeral of Mrs. J. A. Davidson took place this afternoon. Burial services were conducted by Rev. H. A. Cady and interment took place in Fernhill.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Wm. MacCatechon took place from her late residence, 137 Wright street. Rev. J. C. B. Appell officiated at the burial service, after which the body was conveyed to Cedar Hill.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Mrs. Mary Cunningham, of the North End, met with a serious accident on Christmas morning when she fell in Douglas Avenue and broke her left hip. She was on her way home from church when the accident happened. She was carried into a house nearby and later conveyed to her home. Dr. F. P. Fleming attended her.
