not going before a judge, not if I can help it. You can leave the matter in my hands."

THEN Haskell went back to his somnolent village, and the subtle power of Gilder fell on Peter the unjust. Writs, and injunctions, and cautions against issuing of a patent for the Pink Eye, and summonses to appear for examination for discovery, blew upon him a veritable paper blizzard.

The English syndicate that had bought the mine was served with notice of Haskell's claim. And Wright soon received letters of strong protest from the British Isles, instead of Bank of England notes.

Red Meekins' drank to drown his sorrow and wept copiously. He assailed Peter morning, noon, and night to settle. "If this Gowganda boom busts," he wailed, "we'll never catch another sucker to buy the Pink Eye, an' if the vein peters out we'll be on our uppers again, an' what's worse our reputations 'll be wore to a frazzle!"

When Peter learned that Tom Gilder was after him, he knew it was a hold-up, a sure sign that Haskell had no evidence; so he tried to bring the case on for hearing before the Mining Commission.

But the Mining Commission said it was a case for the courts, and the court declared it was a question of evidence. Gilder proved that he had two men out in the wilds looking for witnesses who knew all about it; also intimated that Wright had bribed the witnesses to keep out of the way.

Gilder chuckled when the case was thrown over to the next sitting of the court, and went back to his dingy little office, to sit, like a spider in his web, waiting for the coming of Peter to settle.

AND Peter crawled reluctantly up the narrow flight of stairs that led to the dingy office the very day he received a letter from the English syndicate stating that if within fifteen days they were not given a clear title to the Pink Eye they would cancel the purchase and ask him to return the hundred thousand paid, with the addition of their costs.

Peter had gone to Gilder's office in the fatuous belief that he would escape with a payment of the ten thousand dollars he had been foolish enough to write Haskell about. But when he departed he left behind properly attested documents securing to the man who had grubstaked him one hundred thousand dollars out of the purchase price of the Pink Eye.

Electricity for a Cent

ONE cent's worth of electricity, we are told by a writer in Harper's Weekly, in an article abstracted by The Scientific American, will "make four cups of coffee, or cook a steak, or boil two quarts of water, or make a Welsh-rabbit, or operate a seven-inch frying-pan for twelve minutes, or an electric griddle for eight minutes, or an electric broiler for six minutes, or run a sewing-machine for three hours, or an electric flat-iron for fifteen minutes, or a luminous radiator for eight minutes, or a heating-pad for two hours, or a foot-warmer for fifteen minutes, or a massage-machine for four hours, or a curling-iron once a day for two weeks, or a dentist's drill for an hour and a half, or an electric piano-player for an hour, or vulcanise a patch on an automobile tire, or keep a big glue-pot hot for an hour, or brand electrically one hundred and fifty hams, or raise a passenger elevator five storeys a minute, or raise two hundred and fifty gallons of water one hundred feet high, or raise ten tons twelve feet high in less than one minute."
