This topographic map depicts the central portion of Jasper Park in Alberta, Canada. The terrain is characterized by numerous mountain peaks, many labeled with names such as Mt. Knapall, Mt. Garfield, Mt. Whitecap, Mt. Conquest, Mt. Fitzwilliam, and others. A network of rivers and streams flows through the landscape, including the Athabasca River and its tributaries like the Vermilion and Bow Rivers. Several large lakes are shown, including Pyramid Lake, Patricia Lake, and Spirit Lake. The town of Jasper is centrally located along the Athabasca River. The map includes two scale bars at the top left: one in miles (0 to 10) and another in kilometers (0 to 16). A note indicates that numbers represent survey stations. The boundary between Alberta and British Columbia is visible on the western side of the map.
