

1794

XI. NOVEMBER hath XXX Days. 1794.

What bliss to life can Autumn yield, If glooms, and showers, and storms prevail; And Ceres flies the naked field, And flowers, and fruits, and Phœbus fail? Oh! what remains, what lingers yet, To cheer me in the darkening hour?	The grape remains! the friend of wit, In love, and mirth, of mighty power. Haste—press the clusters, fill the bowl; Apollo! shoot thy parting rays: This gives the sunshine of the soul, This god of health, and verse, and day.
