QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Miscellaneous.

CONCRETE VS. STONE WALL.

Kindly inform me whether it would be better to put a concrete wall or a stone wall under a barn. Which would be the cheaper and better for stock? Have a mile and a half to draw stone, at 25 cents a load.

T. K.

Ans.—Concrete would, under the circumstances, be cheaper than stone, we think, and it makes an even stronger wall, and by making an air space in it, would give one that would be drier and warmer.

FRUIT TREES.

1. Would it hurt young trees to keep tar paper on them the year around?
2. How do the nurserymen grow their young trees, and how and when do they graft them?
3. Where do you get those free books that tell all about orchards and fruit-growing?

SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—1. Tar paper might hurt young trees, and it would be wise to take it off in spring. Besides, it furnishes a harbor for cocoons of noxious insects.

2. Nursery apple stock is grown from seed, and grafting is done near the ground on the small tree trunk, or more commonly a scion is joined to a piece of root six or more inches in length, and this is afterwards planted. The stone-fruit trees are budded on natural stocks.

3. Apply to the Department of Agriculture, Toronto, and to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, stating your wants, and the literature will be sent to you.

MATERIAL FOR CEMENT TANKS.

Kindly let me know how much cement to build a water tank 20x10x6 feet; how much cement to build two water tanks 5x5x5 feet. Kindly state thickness of walls and floor, or bottoms, etc.; also amount of material to use.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—It may be assumed, in the absence of any statement to the contrary, that these tanks are to be underground. The larger of the two should have walls six inches thick, and the bottom should have a thickness of four inches. There ought to be bars of iron across the center, ends bent and imbedded in walls, to resist pressure of earth. Such a tank of concrete, mixed 1 to 5, would require 2 1/2 cords of gravel and 14 barrels of cement. The smaller tank, built of the same strength of mixture, with 5-inch walls and 4-inch floor, would need 1/2 cord of gravel and about 3 barrels of cement.

BLACK-LEG—COWS NOT COMING IN HEAT.

1. I lost a heifer that was in good condition, from what I believe to be black-leg, as she appeared to be well the previous evening, and next morning she was dead, without a struggle, and on skinning her I noticed black spots on hind quarter. We lost a three-year-old heifer a year ago similarly affected. Is there any danger of contagion, and what is cause of it?
2. What is the best thing to bring a cow in heat? I saw something about it some time ago in your paper. Would yeast be of any account? J. R. K.

Ans.—1. Black-leg, also known as symptomatic anthrax, quarter evil, etc., is distinctly a cattle disease. It is not infectious, so far as being transmitted from animal to animal, but is caused by a germ which resides in the soil, and which invades the system through wounds of the skin or mucous membrane. It attacks principally animals of from six months to two years of age, though younger and older cattle are also liable to the disease. Nothing can be done to cure black-leg. The disease can be prevented by vaccination. The vaccine can be procured from Dr. Rutherford, Veterinary Director-General, Ottawa, with necessary instrument and directions.

2. The yeast treatment is used only when the cow is in season, to effect impregnation. Our veterinary editor has found that the administration of two drams nux vomica three times a day to a cow has often apparently had the desired effect, by stimulating the nervous system. Letting the bull run with the herd in the summer months, it is thought, is likely to have the same effect in some cases.
