How the Myth Originated.

As it has well been said of popular proverbs, that they are the wisdom of many and the wit of one, so theological and moral myths grew up in the popular imagination, and were nursed there till in happy season they received a definite shape from some one representative man, whose inspiration led him to express in a striking form what all felt to be true and all were willing to believe. The first framers of the myth were, no doubt, perfectly aware of the significance of these imaginative pictures; but they were aware as poets, not as analysts. It is not, therefore, necessary to suppose that in framing their legends they proceeded with the full consciousness which belongs to the framers of fables, allegories, and parables.

During a certain early stage of national life, which cannot be accurately defined, but which always precedes a regular written literature, the popular myth, like a tree or plant, becomes subject to a process of growth and expansion, in the course of which it not only receives a rich embellishment, but may be so transformed by the vivid action of a fertile imagination, and by the ingrafting of new elements, that its original intention may be altogether obscured and forgotten. How far this first significance may in after times be rightly apprehended depends partly on the degree of its original obviousness, partly on the amount of kindred culture possessed by the persons to whom it is addressed.

As of essentially popular origin and growth the myth cannot, in the proper sense, be said to have been the creation of any poet, however distinguished. Much less could a popular minstrel like Homer, using a highly polished language, and who manifestly had many predecessors, be said to have either created the characters or invented the legends about the Greek gods, which form the critics of the last century used to call the "machinery" of his poems. In regard to theological myths, which are most deeply rooted in the popular faith, such a poet as Homer could only turn to the best account the materials existing, with here and there a little embellishment or expansion, where there was no danger of contradicting any article of the received imaginative creed.—John Stuart Blackie, in "On Interpretation of Popular Myths."

Obstacles.

The mistake commonly made is to view an obstacle as "an immovable obstruction," whereas it is only a difficulty of some kind, which can be overcome with a little perseverance and intelligence. Regarded in this light, obstacles are to be welcomed, for they develop our strength of character. If everything is smooth and plain-sailing, calling for no special effort on our part, we cannot expect to make the most of ourselves and develop our capacities to the full. It is opposition that brings out our reserve forces, carrying us on to greater achievement.

Those who rise superior to their difficulties are bound to make progress, if they consistently triumph over every obstacle as it is met. It is a common but very unfortunate thing for young people to get discouraged when they come up against an impediment of any kind. They should really regard all such trials as tests of character. Forceful personalities are formed in just that way—by measuring wits with contrary circumstances. Let all those who aspire to win to high place take heart at what Mr. Bok tells them, out of his practical experience: "I looked at the top, and instead of finding it overcrowded, I was surprised at the few who had reached there; the top fairly begged for more to climb its heights."—Hamilton Spectator.

Forethought in Plants.

The apparent forethought in preparing materials and storing them for a time of need is not manifested by the trees alone, but in a greater or less degree it is expressed by every plant that grows—more manifest in those that live more than a single year. What wonders are performed beneath our very feet! If we could look beneath the thick woven sward of the meadows, or roll back the decaying leaves of the forest, or pluck up the thickened root-stocks of the water lily and kindred forms from their oozy beds beneath the shallow lakes, we should find in every place evidence of instinct-like forethought among the plants and provision for their future wants. . . . All the wealth of beauty in early spring—the green blade of grass—the fragrant Arbutus of the hill-side and the golden Caltha by the brook—these all are the products of plant labor of the former year. These slow, secret processes are hid from the eye of the most careful observer, and they would never be known were it not for the sudden display of leaf and flower in springtime that reveals the secret of this hoarded wealth.—Paul Asel Chadbourne, in "Instinct in Animals and Men."

Time for the back-seat driver to take a back seat.

Surnames and Their Origin

THACKERAY Variations—Thackeray, Thackuray, Thackman, Thacker Thatcher. Racial Origin—English. Source—An occupation.

In the Government and religious records, tax lists and the like of medieval England such names as "Roger le Thacker" and "Hobbe le Thechere" are to be found.

At that time, of course, the appendages to the given names for the most part were purely descriptive, signifying the trade which their bearers followed. The trade was that of roofing, for with rare exception the ordinary house of the Middle Ages had a thatched roof.

Later the same names are met, but here and there minus the "le," showing that in some cases at least they were being used as real and not merely descriptive names. Still later such combinations as "Walter Thacker, le Cordwainer," proved that the name had become a family one, and that the said Walter was not a thatcher at all, though his name might indicate it.

The harsher pronunciation generally developed in the northern parts of England and the softer in the south, just as the same words became "church" in the south and "kirk" in the north, or "flak" in the north and "fish" in the south, or again "dike" in the north and "ditch" in the south.

The flourishing ending "ay," later developing in some cases to a plain "y," were simply whimsical or vain endings added in much the same spirit that some names were Latinized to show the learning of their bearers.

CHISHOLM. Racial Origin—Lowland Scottish. Source—Geographical.

Though the origin of this family name, which is the name of one of the Highland clans of Scotland, is not Gaelic at all, most of those who bear the name are descendants of Gaels, with blood that originally came from Ireland.

The exact racial classification of the Lowland Scottish has never been settled with finality. That they were originally a Teutonic, rather than a Celtic, race is certain, but they have never been definitely placed as belonging to the Germanic (like the Anglo-Saxons) or the Scandinavian (like the Norse) branch of that great racial division. There is very good philological evidence that the Scottish dialect (which, incidentally, is not the language of the Highlanders, but of the Lowlanders) is not a corruption of English, as is commonly supposed, but a development independent of it, from a tongue dissimilar neither to the ancient Saxon nor Norse. It has, however, been complicated by the influence of the neighboring English through all periods.

However, the name of Chisholm (note the Saxon ending, which means meadow land) was the name of the home of the Lowland family which founded the Highland clan, gathering its followers from among the Gaels. The name, as first recorded, was spelled "Chishelme." This was in the fourteenth century, in about the middle of which the acquisition of Highland territory and the formation of the clan is placed.

WEAK AND NERVOUS

The Condition of a P. E. I. Lady Who Again Rejoices in Good Health.

"I can most heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all weak people," says Mrs. Augustin Arsenault, Wellington Station, P.E.I. "Before I began their use I was very weak and nervous. I had always worked hard, with no thought of my health, until suddenly my strength left me. I began to feel tired and depressed, and did not sleep well at night, feeling just as tired in the morning as when I went to bed at night. I began to feel discouraged when I would think of the work necessary for me to do. I got some medicine from the doctor whom I consulted, but it did not appear to meet my case as I showed no improvement while taking it. Then a neighbor advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got a supply of this medicine. I very soon found they were helping me, and I continued their use until I was well again, and I have been strong and well ever since." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing—and do it well. They build up, purify and enrich the blood, and as the blood supplies the whole body, new life is given to the entire system. Better sleep, steady nerves, improved appetite, increased vigor—all these can be yours by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Begin to-day. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Tough Luck. "He was so adorable! We got out about five miles and the car broke down." "Gee! You were lucky." "No, he turned out to be an auto mechanic and the stupid boy fixed the thing right up."

Don't Leave Children Alone.

"An official having a good deal to do with the Child Life of the country, it is my duty to warn parents everywhere of the terrible seriousness of leaving young children alone in the house," said J. J. Kelso to a press representative. "One cannot reach this evil by law—it must be through an appeal to the sense of right and responsibility resting upon all parents. These horrible burnings are all too frequent and the recent tragedy should teach a lasting lesson. It is not a good excuse to say that children were left sound asleep, or that there was apparently no danger. Children do not stay asleep. They wake up and rush about searching for parents and even in the daytime lively children left to themselves are always in danger. The only safe rule is not to take a chance where precious little lives are concerned."

Mortality Among the Classes.

Sir Arbuthnot Lane, in a review of Mr. Ellis Barker's work on "Health" published in the English Spectator, speaks as follows:

The author gives convincing proofs of the advantage of plain living on natural food, combined with outdoor exercise. Farm workers and clergymen are the healthiest classes of the community, doubtless because both lead simple lives, with much exercise in the open air. Butchers and merchant seamen are among the most short-lived people. The mortality among butchers is twice as great, while that of merchant seamen is three and one-half times as great as that of clergymen and agricultural laborers. Butchers and seamen live largely on meat, preserved meat, preserved vegetables and other stale food which is only eaten sparingly or not at all by the clergy and rural workers; hence the high mortality of the sailors not withstanding the bracing air of the sea. Many think cancer is an old-age disease. If there were a cancer age, cancer mortality would be higher among farm workers and clergymen, among whom longevity is greatest; but according to Mr. Barker, the cancer mortality is twice as high among the short-lived butchers and seamen.

Always we hear his cheery cheer and twitter; The ever-changing seasons much the same To him and his, foregathered on the litter Of street or dooryard,—fearless, without shame.

The busy, happy, self-conscious bird, (Midst city noises, raucous, loud and shrill.) In cheerful twittering is ever heard; Abuse him not and bid him not be still! In city square, or grassy, graveled park, He shares the pigeon's or the squirrel's feast, And, envying not the skyward singing lark, Accepts his lot, content to be the least.

As he the debris of the gutter rifles, A bold, glad twittering,—the song he sings; A picker-up of ill-considered trifles, To whom God grants the skyward gift of wings. —Donald Bain in The Monitor.

Diplomatic. "Let me see some of your black kid gloves," said the lady to shopman. "These are not the latest style, are they?" she asked, when they were produced.

"Yes, madam," replied the shopman; "we have had them in stock only two days." "I don't think they are, because the fashion paper says, black kids have tan stitches, and vice versa. I see the tan stitches, but not the vice versa." The shopman explained that "vice versa" was French for seven buttons, so she bought three pairs.

The forest has been so ravaged by fire that the growth rate is seriously affected; at the present time annual growth will not meet annual use, and all losses through fire, insects, and decay cause further net depletion of forest capital.

The Test. The big man was telling the interviewer how he got started in his profession. "When I was an infant, my good folks were undecided what I'd become when I grew up, and they struck on a plan. They fetched an apple, a prayer-book and a dollar-bill. If I played with the apple, a farmer I'd be—if I'd play with the prayer-book, I'd be a person—if I'd play with the dollar-bill, I'd be a banker. They left me alone for a few minutes, and when they entered the room later I was eating the apple, reading the prayer-book, and I had put the dollar-bill in my pocket—so that's how they made me a politician."

CARRIED WIFE TO BED

Suffered So She Could Not Walk. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minesing, Ontario.—"I am a practical nurse and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to suffering women. For three months I was almost helpless and could not sit at the table long enough to drink a cup of tea. Many a time my husband carried me to bed, I would be so weak. Then he read in the paper of a woman suffering as I did who got better after taking the Vegetable Compound, so he went and got it for me. When I had taken three bottles I was just like a new woman and have had splendid health ever since. When I feel any bearing-down pains I always take it; sometimes a half bottle or whatever I need. It is my only medicine and I have told many a one about it. Any one wanting to know more about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I will gladly write to her. I do all I can to recommend it for I feel I owe my life and strength to it." —Mrs. NEAL BOWSER, R. R. 1, Minesing, Ontario. Do you feel broken-down, nervous, and weak sometimes? Do you have this horrid feeling of fear which sometimes comes to women when they are not well? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent to take at such a time. It always helps, and if taken regularly and persistently will relieve this condition.
