You say you love me-can I trust That she, by many woo'd, By one, at length, has had her heart To constancy subdued?

Perchance some other love is there-But do not tell me so :-Since knowledge would but bring me grief, 'Tis better not to know.

Perchance that eye has beam'd with love In days I knew not thee-That ruby lip hath bent in smiles For others than for me; But let that lip still silence keep, I'll trust its love-like show : Since knowledge would but bring me grief, 'Tis better not to know.

Oh! what a simple fondness mine, Whose wishes make its creed ! But let me think you love me still, And I'll be blest indeed! 'Tis better that the eye ne'er see, Than that its tears should flow-When knowledge would but bring us grief, Tis better not to know.

. From " Travels in the East." ARMENIAN BURIAL GROUNDS.

At Smyrna, the burial ground of the Armenians, like that of the Moslem, is removed a short distance from the town, sprinkled with green trees, and is a favorite resort, not only with the bereaved, but with those whose sorrowful feelings are thus deeply overcast. I met one morning a little girl with a half playful countenance, bearing blue eyes, and sunny locks, bearing in one hand a small NEWSTAGE LINE cup of china, and in the other a wreath of flowers. Feeling a very natural curiosity to know what she could do with these bright things in a place that seemed to partake of so much sadness. I watched her light motions. Reaching a retired grave, covered with a plain marble slab, she emptied the seeds-which is appeared the cup contained—into the slight cavities p that had been scooped out in the corners of the level tablet, and laid the wreaths on its pure surface. "Why," I inquired, the season, the Stage calling at the principle of Upper Ganada, I have seized and taken of Upper Ganada, I have seized and taken Court, and put in bail to the action, or "my sweet little girl, do you put the seeds | pal Hotels in both places in those little bowls there ?

Brewster's letters on "Natural Magic,"

Cally, Wrung, Arthmetic, Book-keeping,
History, Geography, Latin, Geometry, the theory of Land Surveying, and Algebra. is an experiment in which a heavy man is raised with the greatest facility, when he is lifted up the instant that his own lungs, and those of the persons who raise him, are inflated with air. Thus, the heaviest person in the party lies down upon two at each leg and one at cach shoulder, then try to raise him. The person to be raised gives two signals by clapping his hands. At the first signal he himself and the four lifters begin to draw a long, full breath, and when the inhalation is completed, or the lungs filled, the second signal is given for raising the person from the chair: To Band, and Half-round do. ; Spring, Cast, his surprise, and that of his bearers, he rises with the greatest facility, as if he were no heavier than a feather .- Manchester Examiner.
