GOT NO SHOW

Charlie Hicklin Thinks Mayor Cowan Got Busy at the Wrong Time—All the Good Things Gone

Big Charlie Hicklin had a grievance when he struck the editorial sanctum this morning. It wasn't the customary yarn with the culminating hearty ha-ha. "This man Cowan ought to be kicked around," the bloke declared plaintively. "Under his regime the poor man ain't got no chance at all. Now, here's this man Lenfestey, right here in our own office—what chance has he got, anyhow. He just goes on the School Board when Cowan butts in. It's always the way, just as soon as a poor man gets in line, 'Fess aint had time. He aint even got a house and lot but of it yet, let alone had a chance to sell the High School or the County Buildings for fifty cents. It don't seem right to me. Before he gets a chance someone always kinder sees him coming and butts in. A poor man aint got no show at all."

BOY STARVING IN BOX CAR

Was Playing in Car and Companions Saw Him Carried Away

He Hid From Man Whom He Thought was a Railroad Detective—Afraid of Being Arrested

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—That 8-year-old Louis Dobek is starving in a box car somewhere along the line of the Pennsylvania railroad, between this city and the western grain fields, is the belief of the police, who have been investigating his disappearance since last Tuesday.

Young Dobek was last seen in his long line of freight cars, stretching 60 miles from Cadiz into the Atlantic, signalled to the main fleet the news that the enemy had put out to sea. On the evening of the following day the French and Spanish fleets were sighted, and the morning of Oct. 21 disclosed the enemy formed in close line of battle.

Nelson's Immortal Watchword.

The story of the battle does not need to be told. Nelson had 27 ships of the line and four frigates; Villeneuve 33 ships of the line and seven frigates. The odds in ships and still more in men and weight of metal were heavily against the allied fleets, and in his own words, "to amuse" his fleet with a signal, he proposed to telegraph, "Nelson confides that every man will do his duty" — ultimately changed to the classic signal and immortal watchword, "England expects that every man will do his duty."

Nelson's Death.

At a quarter past 1 o'clock Nelson received his death wound from one of the sharpshooters in the midst of the French ship, "Redoubtable," but he lingered on till half-past four, long enough to know the decisive character of his victory. Dying as he had said, he was frequently overheard to mutter, "Thank God, I have done my duty," his last whisper being, "God and my country." So passed the man who, in his devotion to duty, has been universally accepted as the embodiment of the ideal held best and highest by the British people.

An Interesting Tribute.

By C. A. P.—Among the most interesting tributes in connection with the Nelson centenary is the one which the daily papers, is an immense autumn-tinted maple leaf bearing an anchor lichen and the emblems of the rose, shamrock and thistle from Victoria and Esquimaux branch of the Navy League. At the service held at the foot of the column yesterday afternoon the agents-general of the colonies were all present.

Value of Our Fisheries.

The Morning Post uses the Nelson centenary to draw attention to the wilful failure of the Admiralty to recognize the value of the North American fisheries as a school for seamen.

St. Kitts' Wreath Presented.

Lord Strathcona handed over the St. Catharines' wreath at the centenary dinner given in the Fishmongers' Hall Thursday night, where a cablegram was read from Admiral Togo expressing his everlasting admiration and devotion for the great admiral.

The Governor-General will arrive at 11 o'clock, the scholars taking up their position half an hour earlier.

Prof. Stephen will read Kirkling's "Recessional" and the ceremonies will conclude with the National Anthem.

In the hour set apart songs, essays and Nelson's signals formed the program, and the two prizes presented by the Daughters of the Empire for the best essays on "Our Empire" were presented to Miss Cora Willis of Wellesley School and Frederick Reid of Ryerson School. Lieut.-Gov. Clark made a patriotic address. There will be concerts and commemorative services in churches to-day and to-morrow.

NELSON'S CENTENARY

Brief Sketch of Incidents Immortal in British History.

Interesting Tributes From Canadian Navy League—Value of Our Fisheries as Schools for Seamen—The St. Catharines' Wreath Presented—Admiral Togo Expresses Devotion to the Great Admiral.

London, Oct. 21.—One hundred years ago to-day was fought the battle of Trafalgar, still the greatest naval combat to which history bears record, and only equalled in importance to the British people by the defeat of the great Armada. It was in September, 1805, Nelson took command of the British fleet, for the first time in his own absolute control. On October 19 his long line of frigates, stretching 60 miles from Cadiz into the Atlantic, signalled to the main fleet the news that the enemy had put out to sea. On the evening of the following day the French and Spanish fleets were sighted, and the morning of Oct. 21 disclosed the enemy formed in close line of battle.

CONFISCATED THE BUTTER

Chief Holmes Butted in on the Market and Was Butter In

Forty Four Pounds of Butter Which Was Short Weight Will Be Given to Charitable Institutions

Chief Holmes and his staff of policemen made a raid on the market this morning and seized 44 pounds of butter from seven of the farmers in the sheds. The butter confiscated was all under weight.

Every print of butter on the market was weighed, and out of about 100 there were 4 that did not weigh a full pound. The policemen spent about three-quarters of an hour on the market and there are seven farmers' wives who will go home minus the purchases they intended to make with their butter money.

The raid has been contemplated for some time, as several complaints have been received recently, and they evidently chose a good time.

The loss will be considerable, as butter is a good price now. One woman lost 18 pounds, which is a matter of $4.50 to her. All the butter confiscated will be donated to the House of Refuge and the Home of the Friendless.

It has been wisely suggested that a small pair of scales be placed at either end of the market building so that if there is any dispute about the weight of butter the matter may be easily settled. In this way farmers would be able to bring short weight butter to the market.

MINISTER'S MESSAGE

Principal J. W. Flewkes has received a personal letter from Hon. Dr. Fyfe notifying him that the Minister has received the program forwarded and is much pleased with it. The Minister says he will arrive at one o'clock on Tuesday and specially asks to visit all the schools and the Collegiate Institute.

FORGET THE PAST

The services at the First Presbyterian Church to-morrow will be of an interesting character, being the first regular services by the pastor in the new edifice. Rev. A. H. MacGillivray will speak in the morning on "Rebuilding the Temple," and in the evening on "Progress by Forgetting the Past." The themes suggest that both addresses will be of an appropriate and interesting character.

SNOW 24 INCHES DEEP

Newberry, Mich., Oct. 21.—The worst October blizzard in 25 years is now raging; 24 inches of snow having fallen since 11 o'clock last night. The damages to fruit trees and shrubbery will amount to $10,000.

Cadillac, Mich., Oct. 21.—Cadillac had a snow storm of several hours' duration and a fierce gale of wind. Farmers report severe loss to crops not under cover, especially potatoes, of which there is a large shortage.

Last Saturday afternoon fire destroyed the large barns of John Cooper, Chatham, lot 2, concession 15, Chatham Township, also the year's crop belonging to James Campbell, and a crop of 100 acres off John Cooper's land. The fire was caused by burning stubble, that was being burned in a field adjoining. The buildings were insured but the contents are uninsured. Mr. Campbell was working the farm on shares with Mr. Cooper.

Tobacco is certainly king in the southern and southwestern parts of Kent County, and now that this year's crop is well in, every day brings quota of reports of the extraordinary yield in some localities. The weed this year is an unusually heavy crop of excellent quality, and in spite of the conflict waged with various slugs, whose absence last year was most noticeable, nearly every farmer growing a crop of tobacco is reporting receipts of from $100 to $200 an even more per acre. One of the most successful growers has been, and is, Gilbert L. Pardo, of Cedar Springs, who sold his last year's crop for $1,500, and this off only eight acres.
