The gentleman who had so urgently requested an interview was a devoted friend, who had obtained means of helping Ernest at a serious crisis in his affairs.

It had been truly reported that he was in a position of pecuniary emberrasament, owing to the failure of mercantile house with which he had be intimately connected. Whispers affecting his own solveny had followed on the bankruptcy of the firm. He had already endexored to obtain a diverse of money on the usual conditions, and had been met by excuses for delay. His friend had now arrived with a letter of introduction to a capitalist well known in commerciate gircles for his daring speculations and his great weath. Looking at the connected weath. Looking at the connected weath. Lo a capitalist well known in commercial circles for his daring speculations and his great wealth. Looking at the letter, Earnest observed that the envelope was sealed. In spite of that ominous innovation on established usage, in cases of personal introduction, he presented the letter. On this occasion he was not put off with excuses. The capitalist flatly declined to discount Mr. Lismore's bills unless they were backed by responsible names.

In her own house, was a woman who had risen to a new place in his estimation.

"I am afraid you don't thank me for fercing you to keep your engagement," she said with her friendly your generous forgetfulness of your self is willing to make. I respect you; I admire you; I admire you; I thank you with my whole heart.
