STINNES' POWER IN GERMANY

With the death of Hugo Stinnes there disappears a figure that has dominated the German scene during the last two years, or, to speak precisely, since the murder of Walter Rathenau in early Summer of 1922. Rathenau and Stinnes embodied two strongly contrasting types of German capitalism as it emerged from the war. The former was much the more winning personality and the broader spirit. He read the lessons of the war in terms of whole German people. He foresaw for his country a future devoid of imperialistic dreams and devoted to useful productivity in close and harmonious cooperation between capital and labor. Stinnes thought rather in terms of personal and class opportunity. He cannot be acquitted of the charge of capitalizing the necessities of his countrymen for his own aggrandizement. As the chief architect of the new system of "vertical" trust organization, he stood up before the world as the personification of a dehumanized efficiency.

Concerning his wealth and the farflung net of his business operations it is probable that there has been a good deal of mythologizing, yet the reality was sufficiently impressive. His finger was in everything and everywhere and sometimes the finger was followed by the whole hand and the fist. Coal, iron, steel, ships, forests, newspapers, down to the castles and chateaus of the fallen princes, were all grist. He was everywhere in Germany and also in Switzerland, Scandinavia, Austria, the Balkans, Russia. This seemingly insatiable activity was not altogether the outcome of a titanic ambition to dominate. There was also the much more humble and practical reason of putting as much of his wealth as he could—derived in large measure from the collapse of the currency—in safe storage abroad. His foreign investments were part of that flight of capital with which the McKenna committee has just been dealing. Placed at the disposal of his country, it might have brought Europe further along than we find it today.

His attitude on reparations was ambiguous. Rathenau was wholeheartedly for a policy of treaty fulfillment and peace at home. Stinnes was now here, now there. At one time he would be breathing defiance against the Allies, and the next, he would be found engaged in all sorts of parleys with the enemy. Stinnes' reparation tactics were as a matter of fact, dictated as much by home considerations as by the foreign situation. He was bent upon the abolition of the eight hour day and other advantages won by German labor in the revolution. He steadily hammered away at the point that reparations could never be paid unless the German people consented to work harder; a thesis which may be true but which in Stinnes was regarded as suspect by a great part of the German people.

Poincare brought Stinnes to the scratch. What the weak government at Berlin could not accomplish in taming the German industrialists was brought about by the French invasion of the Ruhr. That thrust came home to Stinnes and his associates, and there followed the temporary arrangement for reparations in kind which may be said to have paved the way for the broader solution envisaged by the Dawes experiment.

A political force at home and by some regarded as the power behind Cuno and Stresemann, the Successors of Chancellor Wirth, the disappearance of Stinnes brings no loss to those elements in Germany which look forward to a straightforward settlement of the foreign problem and policy of peace and labor and democracy at home in the spirit of Rathenau.

YOUNG DAUGHTER MADE WELL

Mother Tells How Her Daughter Suffered and Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vancouver, B. C.—"My daughter is a young girl who has been having severe pains and weak and dizzy feelings for some time and had lost her appetite. Through an older daughter who had heard of a woman who was taking it for the same trouble, we were told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My daughter has been taking it for several months and is quite all right now. It has done all it was represented to do and we have told a number of friends about it. I am never without a bottle of it in the house, for I myself take it for that weak, tired, worn-out feeling which sometimes comes to us all. I find it is building me up and I strongly recommend it to women who are suffering as I and my daughter have."—Mrs. J. McDONALD, 2947 26th Ave. East, Vancouver, B. C.

From the age of twelve a girl needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time. If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter, make life easier for her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for such conditions.

CANADA'S NATIONAL PLAYGROUND

Canadians are fortunate in their National Parks, in that they have within their borders Alpine scenery which is not equalled anywhere on the continent, and more and more they are realizing that holidays in Canada hold for the lover of out-of-doors all the thrills that could be found anywhere in the world. Jasper National Park contains many high peaks, eternally snowcapped, and on the sides of the mountains are glaciers which have stood the test of ages. Millions of tons of ice, stretching, in some instances, almost as far as the eye can see, lure the adventurous climber to new attempts, while in the calm, peaceful valleys, wild game of all kinds live at peace with mankind and the world. Additional bungalows for the accommodation of guests are to be erected at Jasper Park Lodge, the log-cabin hostelry of the Canadian National Railways at Jasper National Park, in time for the opening of the 1924 season, it is announced by officials of the Hotel Department, Canadian National Railways. During last season the popularity of Jasper National Park was so great that the capacity of Jasper Park Lodge was taxed, and the additional bungalows being provided this year will take care of many more guests. Four 4-room bungalows, each room with bath, and two 12-room bungalows, each room also having private bath, are being erected. In addition, a double-deck boathouse, with the upper floor for conventions, etc., is being constructed, and an octagonal curio building is being built near the main Lodge. Four new buildings are being erected to serve as employees' quarters, the kitchens are being extended and the main lounge is being enlarged to provide for a ladies' reception room and for a men's billiard and card room. The lodge is one of the finest summer resorts on the Continent.
