"The Dominion's March" is About Ended.

"Put a branch in Buffalo," reads an advertisement in Toronto theatre programmes this week. "Why?" Because the Dominion's march toward industrial independence is ended. Strong words these—frank, open speaking, with a vengeance, and worthy in all respects of the energetic and progressive Buffalo organizations who signed their names below it and paid for its insertion—the Chamber of Commerce and the Manufacturers' Club of Buffalo. It is the way men talk who have not only spied out the promised land but are apparently confident of their ability to enter into possession of it in the very near future.

"The Dominion's march toward industrial independence is about ended." There is the paeon of the great industries over the prospective triumph of their sobriety; there is the slogan of the Trusts who have been looking for years with anxious eyes at our wealth of natural resources; there is the rallying cry of depressed trade and of hungry exploiters all along the border.

Nor is there anything surreptitious or secretive in it. The two most powerful commercial influences of Buffalo publicly subscribe to it; they shout it abroad not only in the United States, but in the nearest large city of Canada. The mine has been laid and the fuse is already lighted. "Come over and make what terms you can"—that is the purport of their message.

"The Dominion's march toward industrial independence is about ended." That is the way men talk who feel that they are speaking with the authority of certain knowledge. President Taft put it more delicately, but President Taft is a diplomat and not a business man. His "evangelist," Mr. Hearst, has said it many times in seductive words and alluring words, but Mr. Hearst is an "evangelist" and has the feelings of his "honest and earnest friends" and co-workers in Canada to consider.

The Buffalo Chamber of Commerce and the members of the Manufacturers' Club were constrained by none of these restrictions. They could speak out what was in their minds—and they did. All they neglected to mention was who had told them that this was to be the result of reciprocity—and that, after all, was not necessary.

"The Dominion's march toward industrial independence is about ended." Let us hear no more from Canadian reciprocity-shouters about the agreement "affecting only natural products," or about President Taft's simple and sincere desire to foster our national growth, or the "absurdity" of reading into the pact more than appears on the surface. The gentlemen of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce and of the Manufacturers' Club have made all this abundantly plain.—Star.

Big Men Breaking Through the Lines

Another bomb was thrown into the camp of the reciprocity supporters when Mr. Thomas Robertson, of Toronto, head of the great confectionery firm of Robertson Brothers, Limited, announced on this occasion he would not support Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Mr. Robertson has been a Liberal since the days of George Brown. His gigantic factory employs six hundred loyal people. It is the largest exclusively confectionery factory in the Dominion.

Mr. Robertson is a man of broad experience. He did not announce his break with the Liberal party without mature consideration. He sees the industrial life of the country threatened and its transportation services injured. There is no aspect of the agreement and its possible consequences that Mr. Robertson has not studied. The following statement to a reporter of The News makes the position clear:

THE STATEMENT.

Mr. Robertson dealt with the effects of reciprocity on his own business and then with the commercial and national consequences.

"You can see for yourself what the result of reciprocity will be as far as our business is concerned," he said. "We are going to be crowded out by the confectionery manufacturer on the other side of the line. In fact, our place will be destroyed altogether. We now employ six hundred hands and we have through all these years built up a business that now extends from Halifax to Vancouver. This reciprocity agreement is a rough deal for me, an old Liberal, who built up this business from a very humble beginning."

BY WHAT RIGHT?

"I want to know what right any man has to take away from me my business. How would the farmer like to have his farm wrestled from him?"

SENATOR JAMES McMULLEN

Senator James McMullen, who fought and won a valiant battle in the Liberal interests through four general elections in North Wellington has decided to part company with the Government on the reciprocity issue. The announcement that such an influential and respected Liberal leader takes Mr. Borden's view of the trade agreement has caused a flurry in the Liberal camp of North Wellington, and will have a wide influence throughout the Dominion. The Senator sent a message to Sir James Whitney, who spoke on Wednesday night at Mount Forest, that, although unable to be present he endorsed the speaker's attitude towards reciprocity and wished his cause every success.

MR. J. D. PENNINGTON

Mr. J. Pennington, a loyal supporter hitherto a Liberalism in Dundas, and through his personal qualities and his ownership of the Valley City Sailing Company, a citizen whose opinion is respected, has split from his party and come forward to combat the so-called "Reciprocity" agreement. The agreement affects Mr. Pennington's industry not a jot; he views it on general business and national grounds, and is giving his support to the local Conservative candidate, Mr. Gordon C. Wilson.

MR. R. E. DALE OF HARRISTON

Yet another "separated" Liberal is Mr. R. E. Dale, whom the people of Harriston elected Reeve for this year. Mr. Dale has been a Liberal all his life, but regards the agreement as an attack upon the farming interests of Canada. He is therefore giving his services in several ridings addressing audiences in the interests of the anti-reciprocity candidate.

Canada's True National Policy.

1. Retain the Canadian home market.
2. Develop a varied industrialism in the Canadian West.
3. Perfect our east and west railway and canal systems.
4. Develop the neglected hinterlands of the older Provinces.

At Brockville Mr. Borden said: "We have hardly begun to realize the potentialities of our material development. Consider this great Province of Ontario and consider especially the possibilities of what is called New Ontario. In that great north land there is everything to attract the settler and to induce immigration; magnificent soil, broad climate, abundant water, splendid stretches of timber land and untold mineral wealth. But there is also the 'white coal,' the magnificent water powers crying out for development and affording opportunities in every branch of industry that are unequalled in any part of the world."

Besides this, there is a ready market near at hand for everything that soil can yield. There is no reason why immigration should not pour into New Ontario within the next ten years at a rate now undreamed of. Much has been done by the Provincial Government to place before intending immigrants the advantages of the northern country, but the Dominion Government has treated this greater Ontario with almost absolute neglect and disregard. The Liberal-Conservative party, if returned to power, will see that New Ontario receives its just and full share of attention and that its wonderful natural advantages are brought to the attention of the world in an effective manner and by efficient methods."

A French Paper Tears the Veneer Away and Reveals the Real Laurier.

Le Devoir, Montreal: "When we are betrayed it is by our own friends," says an old proverb. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the campaign in which he is now actually engaged prove the eternal verity of it.

The ministerial politicians are putting him in an unworthy role. They are making such a barrab about him that one would imagine that he was a rich charlatan or a bungling millionaire.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier returned from Europe. A whole fleet of yachts lined the port at his entrance. All the vessels owned by the country were chartered for the occasion at the people's expense in order to make the ministerial triumph still greater.

Fireworks were set off and the ministerial newspapers that are pensioned by the state went into ecstasies over the prestige of the prime minister, just as formally in Rome the common people, surfeited with food and amusement, gave ovations to any shoddy Caesar.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier goes to the country they unfurl rolls of calico and bunting and in the windows there are paintings and big transparencies wherein Sir Wilfrid Laurier is made to appear as the man who cures ills, or rather as the savior of the Canadian nation.

At Simcoe the "barrab business" took the place of argument.

At Ahuntsic a crowd of flatterers surrounded the prime minister with illuminations of all kinds as if some new Nero had set fire to another Rome.

In Quebec they speak of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and they exploit the sentiment of race and we hear of Sir Wilfrid as a Catholic and French-Canadian patriot.

They speak, and will speak, of the old age of Sir Wilfrid, of the "white locks" of Sir Wilfrid, of the health of Sir Wilfrid, of the "long career" of Sir Wilfrid, of the "forty years of public life" of Sir Wilfrid.

Sir Wilfrid's pretails and his profusions of happiness are and will be the two great ministerial "arguments," and one will see and one has already seen politicians invoking all these things to cover up the turpitudes of the regime and to snatch a new verdict from the French-Canadian people.

And Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself—and great men sometimes lose their heads—sets all shame aside and exploits his own glories and his merits. Again they speak not of policy, but only do they speak of sentiment.
