Squire Pratlet heard the rattling up against the casements and drew his snug easy chair closer to the fire-a great, open mass of glimmering anthracite, and gazed with a sort of sleepy, reflecting satisfaction at the crimson moreen curtains, and a gray cat fast asleep on the hearth, and the canary bird rolled into a drowsy ball of yellow down upon its perch.

"This is snug," quoth the squire; "I'm glad I had the leaky spot in the barn fixed last week. I don't object to a stormy night once in a while when a fellow's under cover, and there is nothing particular to be done.'

'Yes," Mrs. Pratlet answered. She was flitting about between the kitchen and sitting room with a great blue checkered apron tied about her waist.

"I am nearly ready to come in now. "Well, I wonder," sotto voce, "if that was a knock at the door, or just a little rush of wind. She went to the door, nevertheless and a minute or two afterwards she went to her husband's chair. "Joe, dear, it's Luke Ruddiloye," she said apprehensively. The squire never

"But he wants to know if you will lend him a dollar," said Mrs. Pratlet.

"Couldn't you tell him no, without the ceremony of coming to me? Is it likely that I should lend a dollar, or even a cent to Luke Ruddilove? Why I'd a great deal rather throw it among yonder red coals. No-of course not.

Mrs. Pratlet hesitated. "He looks so pinched and cold and wretched, Josiah. He says there is nobody in the world to let him have a

"All the better for him, if he did but know it," sharply enunciated the old squire. 'If he had come to that half a dozen years ago perhaps he would not have been the miserable vagabond he now is.

"We used to go to school together," said Mrs. Pratlet, gently. "He was the smartest boy in the class.

"That's probably true enough," said the squire, "but it don't alter the fact. He is a poor drunken wretch now. Send him about his business, Mary, and if his time is of any consequence, just let him coming here after dollars."

"She'd be better off without, me." he said, down-heartedly.

"But she ought not to be.

"Ought and is are two different things Mrs. Pratlet. Good night; I ain't going to the tavern, although I'll wager the squire thought I was. "And isn't it natural enough that he should think so, Luke : "Yes, yes, Mary; I don't say but what it is," murmured Luke in the same dejected tone he used during the interview. "Stop," Mrs. Pratlet called to him as his hand lay on the door-latch, in a low voice. "Here is a dollar, Luke. Mr. Pratlet gave it to me for an oil-cloth to go in front of the parlor stove; but I will try and make the old one last a little longer. And Luke, for the sake of oldtimes do try and do better. "Well," said Squire Pratlet, "has that unfortunate gone at last?

" "Yes."

"To the Stoke's tavern, I suppose?" "I hope not, Josiah."

"I am afraid it's past hoping for, said the squire, shrugging his shoulders. But Mrs. Pratlet kept her secret in her work of one man cannot produce very own heart

It was six months afterwards that the quire came into the dining room, where his wife was preserving great red apples into jelly.

"Well, well," cried he, "wonders will never cease. The Ruddiloves have gone away. "Where ?

"I don't know-out West somewhere with a colony. And they say Luke's not drank a drop of whiskey for six months.'

I am glad of that," said Mrs. P. "It won't last long," he suggested des airingly.

"Why not?" "Oh, I don't know: I haven't any aith in those sudden reforms.

Mr. Pratlet was silent. She thought thankfully that, after all, Luke had not spent the dollar in liquor.

Six months-six years; the time spec along in days and weeks, almost before busy Mrs. Pratlet knew that it was gone. The Ruddiloves had returned to Seque ett Luke had made his fortune, so the story went on, far off in Eldorado. "They do say," said Mrs. Bucking money, to throw it away in that manner. Mrs. Pratlet felt her cheeks flush. Involuntarily she glanced toward the squire. But he never looked around. She met Mr. Ruddilove that afternoon for the first time after his return to Se quosett-Luke himself, save that the demon of intemperance had been completely crushed, and his better nature triumphing at last. He looked her brightly in the face and held out his hand, saying but one word:

Why Persons Snore

It may not be generally known that it is the vibration of the velum pendulus less a matter of interest to a great many people who either snore themselves or are nnoyed by snorers. Dr. Lewis H. Sayre, of Fifth avenue was asked why people snore. 'Because they don't shut their mouths.

Dr. Savre was asked what cause I snor

"When a man is fatigued," he said, and his self-control is unusually relaxed in sleep, he is apt to let his lower jaw drop down. No man was ever seen or heard to snore with his mouth shut The moral is obvious. The soft palate flaps like a sheet in the wind, and the near neighbors of the snoring sleeper are correspondingly disturbed. Now, the Indians never snore. They think it a disgrace. An Indian believes that if he snores when is young he will grow up to be even less handsome at maturity than nature originally intended. His vanity, therefore, is enough to make a savage sleep in a proper position."

A well known physician up town whose practice has been largely in cases of affection of the respiratory system, was asked whether snoring is a disease "Not so much a disease as a bad hab-

"Easily." "Why do elderly or corpulent people ommonly snore?"

"Because their systems are generally more relraed in sleep, and their mouths then fall open. Any one will be likely to snore if he sleeps with his mouth open, and no one will if he shuts it."
