Captain's Three-Week Vigil by Dead Wife's Side.

There arrived in Falmouth Harbor on Aug. 6th a ship whose captain had steered for twenty-two days with his dead wife at his side. This was the Liverpool barque Sa maritan, commanded by Capt. C. H Parker, which had accomplished the voyage from Adelaide to Falmouth in 107 days. Towards the close of happy voyage the captain's wife was seized with fever, and after several days' illness died on July 17. Both the husband and his seventeen year old daughter were reluctant to commit the body to the deep,

Captain and Mrs. Parker had been vovaging together for over twenty years, during the last five of which their daughter had been with them. Mrs. Parker's body is to be buried in Falmouth Cemetery
