From wedding presents the con versation turned to Christmas giving. How much do you spend on Christmas was the question. A working girl with a good salary

The Necessity for the War to go on Until Germany Throws Up Her

I have before me a circular put out by the American Neutral Conference Committee. It plainly shows that the conference is attempting something not merely impossible, but essentially bsurd. The keen-minded persons who make up its General Committee and its official list have not thought the thing through. They have created an organization to catch a bird by putting salt on its tail.

What, in the name of common sense, could be more obvious than that guarantees against future wars can be secured by "repudiation of military onquest as a means of territorial exnansion; recognition of the right of each people to determine its own social, political, and economic development; world organization for the desense, how is it proposed to get this epudiation, this recognition, this world organization? Has it ever occurred to the men and women who offer this program that in the history of war and pacification just two pacific actions have been followed by a relatively lasting peace? These have been

It is not necessary to rehearse the whole historical narrative. American experience is enough. In the Revolu tionary struggle the British armies or this continent unconditionally surrer dered and, in Parliament, Great Bri tain recognized the independence of her before-time colonies. The War of 1812 was terminated by the desistance of Great Britain from the course which led to hostilities. The Mexican War was ended by the virtual surrender of Mexico; the civil war, by the unconditional surrender of Lee at Appomattox; the Spanish War by the of these events was a final settlemer What would have been the history of the United States in the last fifty years if the military activities of the allied powers-surrender as complete North had been called off in 1863 or as that of Great Britain to the Ameriin 1864 by the influence of a confer- can Colonies; as that of the seceding have had fifty years of peace? Do we suppose that there can be peace in this world until that idea is sinone issue out of this war that can cerely repudiated by the people that many has declared, and by arms supported her declaration, that international covenants and agreements may be disregarded at the convenience of one of the parties thereto, under the plea of military necessity. On what grounds can we assume that a power which takes and defends such a position could be trusted to observe the agreements presumed in a world organization for the development of international co-operation and the settlement of international disputes? (3) Because the only guarantee of a repudiation of military conquest as a neans of territorial expansion will be offered when the great powers, including Germany, actually begin to reduce their armies. Promises won't answer. The thing must be done. Can we imagine that Great Britain, France and Russia will begin to reduce their armies at the end of this war unless Prussian militarism is disavowed by Germany herself and her acts match her words, and do we not know that her words, and do we not know that from the first it has been the declared purpose of the Allies to push this war until Germany stands ready to do that very thing? Do we not know that this is what the Allies are fighting the war for?. Have we not yet grasped the idea that England and France stand ready to make peace any day, any hour, when they can have assurances (that any sane man can trust) that they won't have it all to do over again within at least the next two or three generations? Those assurances will be given when Germany throws up her hands. No assurance short of that pacific gesture will be worth scrap of paper. The issue is one of the most cleancut, straightforward, uncomplicated issues ever presented to a clean-cut, x straight thinking intellect. What we have to strive for is peace-peace that real thing, and not a pious regis-
