AMATEUR OPERATORS UPSET THE WIRELESS

Volley of Sparks That Prevents Securing of News About the Titanic.

[Canadian Press.] Boston, April 17.—The operators at he more important wireless stations in New England, and especially in Boston, are complaining of the interference by amateurs. For the past 48 hours the amateurs have kept up a constant succession of sparks, they succeeded in preventing the Charlestown navy yard station from obtaining even a scrap of the much-desired information from the ships near the Titanic.

A list recently compiled enumerates more than three hundred amateur wireless operators within twenty miles of the state house, who have announced their code signals. It is said that an association is being perfected whereby messages will be taken for transmission between towns and cities in Eastern Massachusetts by these amateurs.

While this is all interesting and educational, the operators of the larger machines all declare that it practically puts them out of the business at time when their work is most needed.
