A Story From the Gatineau That Is En-

Ottawa Free Press, Sept. 11.

A lawyer of this city who was fishing up the Gatineau last spring dropped his gold watch from the boat in which he was sitting. A few days ago he visited the same place and strangely enough inside the first fish he caught was the watch. The match was still going when recovered. same place and strangely enough inside the first fish he caught was the watch. The watch was still going when recovered, and, more than that, had not lost or gained a second in the months that had elapsed since the fish swallowed it. This curious circumstance naturally caused some investigation, and it was found that like many other apparent mysteries was easily accounted for. The watch was of the modern knid for which no key was necessary. Its stem had so lodged in the fish's internal machinery that every time the creature moved his jaw the protruding wheel was turned part way round. In this way the watch was regularly wound day after day. The fish had to eat, and in the act of doing so unconsciously wound the watch, the case of which was somewhat affected by the chemical action of the fish's stomach.

How Spence Got His Tomatoes.

George Spence, blacksmith of Leslieville, came up before Magistrate Kichardson at East Toronto and had to pay some $3.95 before he left. On the 27th of August last, en route to Highland Creek, where he has relatives. Spence got off a wagon at the market gardens of Mr. George Manning, Kingstonroad, and told one of the men there that he had arranged with Mr. Manning in the city to take a bushel of tomatoes, but that as this amount was too much he would now take but half of it. The man thought it was all right, gave Spence the half bushel of tomatoes, and he went on to the Creek with them. Mr. Manning on his return said he had never been approached by Spence and had the matter brought into curf. The defendant said he had asked one Lane to call and settle for the tomatees, but this errand Lane never carried out, as he said he had no hope of ever being reimbursed. How Spence Got His Tomatoes.
