DYSPEPSIA CURED BY B.B.B.

There never was a fisherman, so I've heard the old folks say.
Who caught the biggest fish. Always true And it's just as true in trotting as it is in other things.

That blessing and the brightest when they spread their golden wings; but they and great about the neck; then; but only stand in your basket with the guiltless brood.

Yet after all the sportsman, though he doesn't catch the biggest fish, and he Catches all the life and sunshine that a happy heart can wish.

Old Mother Nature takes him and smooths his wrinkles out.
So get your rods and baits, for the morning's made for trout.

In your soul a little laughter, of the laughing heart a little singing, like the singing of the brook.

And you get your inspiration where it comes from.

They were all commercial travelers, enjoying their cigars on the veranda of Kansas Hotel, shrewd, intelligent knights of the grip and sample case, fragments of what was once a great and powerful people, who nevertheless kept the healthy blood forever coursing through the great arteries of trade. It was Sunday, and the genial travelers were sitting about the table and talking in all the latest dialects.

"Yes, I got my wife in this State," said Frank Cooper, a ruddy representative of a great jewelry house in America's greatest metropolis. "It was out in the western portion of the State where the larger cattle ranches are situated, that I first met a man who now honors me by bearing my name, and if you care to hear a bit of romance I'll tell you how it all came about."

"Business called me to heading town on the Union Pacific road at a time when the county fair was in progress there. These cattle range fairs draw great crowds, you know, for the leading attractions are usually contests of the most exciting and dangerous character, such as riding wild broncos, roping wild steers, etc. On this occasion, however, public opinion seemed to be centered on a bicycle race in which a burly cowboy and a wealthy cattle-owner's 18-year old daughter were the contestants. A handsome prize was offered by the managers of fair, but it sunk almost out of sight when compared with the large sums of money staked upon the race by outside parties.

"During the forenoon the cowboy was pointed out to me on the street—a great swaggering fellow, wearing the inevitable white sombrero and displaying a huge pistol in his belt strapped about his waist. He was talking of the race to a group of his rough companions on the sidewalk in front of the hotel, and before I heard him utter a dozen words I had sized him up as a bully and a braggart, and cherished a hope as to what he would do in the coming contest.

"The grand stand was literally packed with excited humanity and the ground around the track was crowded with spectators to witness the afternoon sport. I was unable to secure a seat on the grand stand, and after much pushing and shoving, succeeded in getting a position against the railing that enclosed the track, but a few yards from the judge's stand. I felt considerably nettled, I don't know why, when I discovered from the conversation of those about me that the cowboy was the favorite in betting circles.

"The gong sounded, and the contestants

"IT SAVED ME DOLLARS."

Forcible Words from an Honest Man—Interesting Experience of a Mill-stream Blacksmith—A Happy, Well Man.

"If you are the boss I'd like to talk with you," Thus were the words of Mr.
B. H. Wilson, who called at our office yesterday, without invitation of anyone, promptly by a thankful host.

He addressed the manager of the Croder Co., with above words. Finding he had right business, I consulted a physician for Chronic Diarrhoea, from which I suffered all summer. I had been told did not help me. Just then I saw a testimonial from a man I knew, who had been cured by your remedy. We got a bottle thought it was no good—only spray Well, sir, the first half bottle helped I kept on taking it. The medicine kept on curing. Now I'm all right, and I saved me a large doctor's bill; and I others that I had cured. I took three bottles, and my case was a very bad one.

"Thank you," he replied, with a smile that caused my young heart to throb with pleasure. "I hope I may be able to do something for you some day."

"We were called to the search to receive the instructions from the judge.
The distance to be ridden was one mile, running start, and in a moment they were gone.

"That great crowd leaned forward with breathless interest as they sped away, and when the crowd quickly drew his daughter and wheeled the stand to enter upon the second half mile without either having gained any perceptible advantage. As the quarter pole was passed it was noticed that the cowboy was a trifle ahead, and the shouts of his back-ers and crowd companions were of the most encouraging nature. I was so far distant that I could not see the race, but I instinctively felt that it meant a look of pain and mortification and that her heart must have throbed painfully over what seemed certain defeat. Under the trees they lay, and were deafening as the cowboy paced the line fully fifteen feet in advance of his fair competitor. Had I possessed sufficient power I felt that I would have experienced some pleasure in springing over the railing and administering a good thrashing to the burly braggart when I heard him mockingly say to us as they came to a stop and dismounted.

"Go home and wash your monkey's dishes. You can't ride a little bit."
"My blood was fired at the taunting remarks, and I hotly exclaimed:
"She is a far better rider than you, and nothing but your brute strength defeated her. I believe she could beat you if given any real trial!"

"The flood of the girl's eyes poured in upon me warmed my heart to the core.
The bully looked at me disdainfully a moment and contemptuously said:
"Boys, get onto the white-choked ten-ter pole. Get onto the silk-harnessed ladies man. If you think the gal can put it into me, you may as well get on one of her fingers."
"And the wheel she rode in the race, "You, an' don't yet presume to be as cherished souvenir of the exciting contest said one of his fellow-travelers.

"O, yes, she has it yet, but she seldom uses it. She now has a machine with four wheels, which she pushes ahead of her, and both she and I think the old carrier is the prettiest, cutest girl baby in America.

An African Traveller.
RESTORED TO HEALTH BY THE USE OF
HAWKER'S BALM.

The following is copied from the Manchester, England, Times:
"Capt. John Lawrence Walsh, who has temporarily returned from Assam and Grand Bassam, Africa, writes under date of Feb.
2nd, 1894, 'I have much pleasure in certifying that I was entirely cured of a severe attack of bronchitis by one bottle of Hawker's Balm of Gilead, which I used in conjunction with a course of cod liver oil and an English climate, which I had contracted in my youth for several years, but have been completely restored by using one bottle. I can recommend it highly.' This testimony is of great value, showing as it does how easily colds resulting from change of climate or sudden change in the weather in any particular locality may be quickly cured. Hawker's Balm of Gilead is sold by all chemists and is sold by all druggists at twenty-five and thirty cents a bottle.

In connection with the above, we note that a physician of the Hawker remedies, New York City, writes: 'I have suffered from dyspepsia for a number of years and was confined to my house for five months.
I have had thirteen New York and Mount Vernon doctors (will name them if necessary) try to cure me, but failed to get any relief.
I tried K. D. C., and am pleased to say the every known remedy for dyspepsia, and found none to benefit me, until I took K. D. C.
I recommend K. D. C. as the dyspepsia's best friend. Try it and prove what I say.'

looked the lead right at the start and darted away from him. Yell! Great Scott! how the crowd did yell as she finished the half-mile fifty feet ahead of her rival, and away on the second stretch with a defiant smile on her handsome face. The cowboy great effort to overtake and pass her, but he might as well have chased a streak of excited lightning as that flying fairy ahead.

When the defeated cowboy came up to the crowd which surrounded the happy victor his face was aflame with chagrin and passion, and with a wicked leer he said to the girl:
"I reckon yer stranger tradefolker lover 'll get a kite for every dollar he won on this."

"Before I could reach him a powerful blow from a fat laid him on the ground; and a large, fine-looking old man stood up and ready to repeat the blow if he made an attempt to rise.

"Take that, you ruffian," he cried.
"This is my daughter, and she's a lady, and the happy change had been effected. He was gradually received and the following statement was voluntarily given by Mrs. Fraser:
"It is now eight years since one morning as I was performing ablutions, when passing my hand over my face, I experienced a pain on the cheek similar to that which I felt when a thorn which has penetrated the flesh is touched. The pain continued after that and appeared to move all over face and head. From that time I was unable to do any work, and the upper lip, then the forehead and head and then the So intense was the agony which I suffered that I was unable to touch my hair and brows, and my eyes felt like veritable balls of fire. My gums were so swollen that I was unable to masticate my food, and as a result I suffered greatly from lack of nourishment. My face became so contracted from the effects of the pain that my best friends could hardly recognize me, and the only relief I could get was from chloral and the use of opium. Finally my local physician, who had been useless in his efforts to help me, said he could do nothing further for me, and my case seemed utterly hopeless.

I then went to Clinton and consulted one of the most skilled practitioners in that city, who diagnosed my case and said he could recommend no treatment that would benefit me. I came home utterly broken down and not knowing what to do. I had read in the newspapers of the marvellous results accomplished by the use of Dr. William's Pink Pills, but as I had never placed much confidence in proprietary medicines so widely advertised, and had relied more on the methods of skilled practitioners, I had not given the matter of using them much thought. As a last resort, however, I determined to give Pink Pills a trial, and I two boxes purchased at the drug store of James Wilson. From the first box I cannot say that I experienced any noticeable benefit, but by the time I was half through with the second box I was feeling rapidly as the terrible pains had ceased, and to a great extent, and I had begun to feel more like my former self. This was a relief, and both she and I think the old carrier is the
prettiest, cutest girl baby in America.

Vernon doctors (will name them if necessary) money on the track. I tell you, fellows, I experienced a delightful surprise when, instead of the coarse, sun-burned girl whom my fancy had pictured, I beheld the prettiest little Western beauty my eyes had ever rested upon. Her face was of a gentle, half tinted cast, her eyes a glorious lustrous brown, and the luxuriant growth of almost golden hair, which fell in loose waves over her shoulders, was a fitting crown for such a lovely little prairie queen. As she rode her glittering nickel wheel slowly about during the arrangement of the preliminaries to the race I thought I had never seen a young woman whose every movement was nearer the very essence of the poetry of motion and nervous, somewhat rattled, you know, and as she rode slowly by the spot where I stood I could not suppress the words of encouragement that sprang to my lips.

"Do not be frightened," I said. You

A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.
Eight Long Years of Pain and Suffering.

A WELL KNOWN GODEFRID LADY REPORTED TO RELIEVE AND RESTORED AFTER FIVE YEARS HAD FAILED—MISERABLE EX-PERIENCE FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD.

From the Godefrid Signal.
The marvellous change which has taken place in the physical condition of Mrs. Cal-loden Fraser, British settler, during the past twelve months has been the chief topic of conversation among her many friends and acquaintance of late, and to all who know of the terrible manner in which she has been afflicted, her lifting up appears to be a little short of marvellous. Mrs. Fraser has a wide circle of acquaintances in Godefrid and vicinity, having resided in this town for over thirty years—ever since her husband, who was a mercenary trader in Bayfield, retired from business and located here. Having heard of the wonderful change that has been brought about in her physical condition, a representative of The Signal called upon Mrs. Fraser at her pleasant home to congratulate her on the improved state of her health, and to find out in what manner the happy change had been effected. He was gradually received and the following statement was voluntarily given by Mrs. Fraser:
"It is now eight years since one morning
a pain on the cheek similar to that which I
after that and appeared to move all over face and head
