

into eddies, in the confusion losing oars, and, in consequence, stopping off a day to make new ones; and, for the sake of greater variety in the programme, boats capsized completely, while the occupants, in an uncomfortably moist condition, cling

GUNNISON'S BUTTE (2,700 feet high).

to the sides and are dashed and hurled against the rocks besetting the channel. Adding an element of real discomfort, boats are irreclaimably lost or disabled; damp and mouldy flour, dried apples, which have received supernumerary washings in