Literary Department.

THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS.

A NARATIVE OF 1757,

BY J. FENIMORE COOPER.

CHAPTER II (CONTINUED.)

"Seek you any here?" demanded Heyward, when the other had arrived sufficiently nigh to of evil tidings."

gent use of his triangular castor, to produce a circulation in the close air of the woods, and leaving his hearers in doubt to which of the young man's questions he responded; when, however, he had cooled his face, and recovered his breath, he continued: "Thear you are ridthitherward myself, I concluded good company in his soul, let us not churlishly reject his comparties."

casting vote," returned Heyward; "we are three to prolong; then, yielding to her gentle influwhilst you have consulted no one but yourself." ence, he clapped his spurs into his charger, and to know one's own mind. Once sure of that,and where women are concerned it is not easy, timed the maiden, waving her hand to the -the next is, to act up to the decision. I have stranger to proceed, as she urged her Narraganendeavored to do both, and here I am."

en the route," said Heyward, haughtily; "the worthless in a duet myself; and we may enliven highway thither is at least half a mile beyond our wayfaring by indulging in our favorite puryou," daunted by this cold reception; "I have tarried ence of a master in the art." at 'Edward' a week, and I should have been! "It is refreshing both to the spirits and to the dumb not to have inquired the road 1 was to body to indulge in psalmody, in befitting seasjourney; and if dumb there would be an end to ons," returned the master of song, unkestadingly my calling." After simporing in a small way, complying with her intimation to follow; "and like one whose modesty prohibited a more open nothing would relieve the mind more than such expression of his admiration of a wittiscism that a consoling communion. But four parts are alwas perfectly unintelligible to his hearers, he together necessary to the perfection of melody. continued, "It is not prudent for any one of my You have all the manifestations of a soft and profession to be too familiar with those he has rich treble; I can, by especial aid, carry a full too instruct; for which reason I follow not the tenor to the highest letter; but we lack counter line of the army; besides which, I conclude that and bass! Yen officer of the king, who hesitat- companied, on the part of the stranger, by a reggentleman of your character has the best ed to admit me to his company, might fill the ular rise and fall of his right hand, which terjudgment in matters of wayfaring; I have latter, if one might judge from the intonations minated at the descent, by suffering the fingers therefore decided to join company, in order that of his voice in common dialogue. the ride may be made agreeable, and partake of social communion."

exclaimed Heyward, undecided whether to give occasion, believe me, his natural tones are bet-practice had rendered this manual accompani-Other's face. "But you speak of instruction, heard." and of a profession; are you an adjunct to the provincial corps, as a master of the noble science psalmody?" demanded her simple companion. of defence and offence; or, perhaps, you are one who draws lines and angles, under the pre- ceeded in suppressing her merriment, ere she ment of the forest could not fail to enlist the tence of expounding the mathematics?"

The stranger regarded his interrogator a momility, he answere l:

"Of offence, I hope there is none, to either party: of defence, I make none-by God's good talents, to be used, and not to be abused. None mercy, having committed no palable sin since can say they have ever known me to neglect my dence would teach us to journey through this called and set apart for that holy office. I lay lable of rude verse has ever profaned my lips." claim to no higher gift than a small jusight into the glorious art of petitioning and thankgiving, as practiced in psalmody."

my longing ears, suffer him to journey in our train. Besides," she added, in a low and hurabate his speed; "I trust you are no messenger ried voice, casting a glance at the distant Cora, who slowly followed the footsteps of their silent "Even so," replied the stranger, making dili-but sollen guide, "it may be a friend added to our strength, in time of need.'

> "Think you, Alice, that I would trust those I: love by this secret path, did Umagine such need: could happen?"

"Nay, nay, I think not of it now; but this with her riding-whip, while their eyes met in a "You appear to possess the privilege of a look which the young man lingered a moment "Even so. The first point to be obtained is in a few bounds was again at the side of Cora.

"I am glad to encounter thee, friend," conset to renew its amble. "Partial relatives have suit. It might be of signal advantage to one, "Even so," returned the stranger, nothing ignorant as I, to hear the epinions and experi-

"Judge not too rashly from hasty and decep-

"Is he, then, much practiced in the art of

Alice felt disposed to laugh, though she sucansweredment, in wonder; and then, losing every mark of fane song. The chances of a soldier's life are words in broken English to Heyward, who, in elf-satisfaction in an expression of solemn hu-but little fitted for the encouragement of more his turn, spoke to the stranger; at once intersober inclinations.'

"Man's voice is given to him, like his other efforts.

last entreating his pardoning grace. I under-gifts! I am thankful that, though my boyhood stand not your allusions about lines and angles; may be said to have been set apart, like the and I leave expounding to those who have been royal David, for the purposes of music, no syl-

"You have, then, limited your efforts to sacred

"Even so. As the psalms of David exceed "The man is, most manifestly, a disciple of all other language, so does the psalmody that Apollo." cried the amused Alice, "and I take has been fitted to them by the divines and sages him under my own especial protection. Nay, of the land, surpass all vain poetry. Happily, I throw aside that frown, Heyward, and in pity to may say that I utter nothing but the thoughts and the wishes of the King of Israel himself; for though the times may call for some slight changes, yet does this version which we use in the colonies of New England, so much exceed all other versions, that, by its richness, its exact-, ness, and its spiritual simplicity, it approacheth, as near as may be, to the great work of the inspired writer. I never abide in any place, sleeping or waking, without an example of this gifted work. Tis the six-and-twentieth edition, promulgated at Boston, Anno Domini 1744; and ing to William Henry; as I am journeying strange man amuses me; and if he thath music is entitled, "The Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs of the old and New Testament; faithfully would seem consistent to the wishes of both pany." She pointed persuasively along the path translated into English Metre, for the Use, Edification, and Comfort of the Saints, in Public and Private, especially in New England."

During this eulogium on the rare production of his native poets, the stranger had drawn the book from his pocket, and fitting a pair of ironrimmed spectacles to his nose, opened the volume with a care and veneration suited to its sacred purposes. Then, without circumlocution or apology, first pronouncing the word "Stand-"If you journey to the lake, you have mistak- almost persuaded me that I am not entirely ish," and placing the unknown engine, already described, to his mouth, from which he drew a high, shrill sound, that was followed by an octave below, from his own voice, he commenced singing the following words, in full, sweet, and melodious tones. that set the music, the poetry, and even the uneasy motion of his ill-trained beast at defiance:

> "How good it is, O see, And how it pleaseth well, Together, e'en in unity, For brethren so to dwell. It's like the choice obtainent,
> From the head to th' beard did go: Down Aaron's beard, that downward went, His garment's skirts unto.

The delivery of these skillful rhymes was acto dwell a moment on the leaves of the little volume; and on the ascent, by such a flourish tive appearances," said the lady smiling; though of the member as none but the initiated may "A most arbitrary, if not a hasty decision!" Major Heyward can assume such deep notes on ever hope to imitate. It would seem that long went to his growing anger, or to laugh in the ter fitted for a mellow tenor than the bass you ment necessary; for it did not cease until the preposition which the poet had selected for the close of his verse, had been duly delivered like a word of two syllables.

> Such an innovation on the silence and retireears of those who journeyed at so short a dis-"I apprehend that he is rather addicted to pro- tance in advance. The Indian muttered a few rupting, and, for the time, closing his musical

> > "Though we are not in danger, common pru-