ated to move the furniture. The next ward of Mrs. Cowtan was that she was living in Brampton. Constable Edson conducted an inquiry at the before the family moved from Ward

Seven, and found that Cowtan was alive, although Mrs. Cowtan said she did not know this until a few days previously.

Cowtan's Story.

Cowtan was seen at Brampton yesterday by The World. He told the story of his supposed drinking, and how he succeeded in so mystifying the police and the reasons for his actions.

He had been several hundred dollars in debt, he said. He was working for an insurance company, but was being very poorly paid. His creditors persistently called at the office of the company, with the result that his chances of promotion and prospects of getting a larger salary were ruined.

Owing as much he did, he knew that he had very little chance of settling one account without his other creditors instantly stepping in and seizing his furniture.

After thinking the matter over for some days, Cowtan continued, he decided to adopt a ruse to gain time in which to make a new start in another position, somewhere in the country, where living would be cheaper.

Could Not Borrow.

As he at that time was situated, there was no chance of borrowing any money, and he also was behind in his house rent. On the morning of Aug.

18, 1911, he put on a suit of dark clothes. Other than a shave and his business suit. After bidding his wife and children goodbye, he started off for the river.

Proceeding to the place where he usually disrobed when going in bathing, he took off the light suit, folded it and taking out his books and a few other things, left them beside his discarded apparel.

Cowtan walked up the stream to the Lambton Mill. From here he struck the line due northwest. That day at noon he arrived at Clarendon. Farmers were threshing and he obtained a job. When he had been here about a week, he started for home one night at 8 o'clock.

He got lost and landed at Cooksville.

Once more he began his journey and about 1 o'clock in the morning landed at home.

Worked in Factories.

Neighbors were helping his wife along so he stayed in until Tuesday morning. The next point he struck was Bolton. Leaving there the next day, he got to Glen Williams and worked for five weeks in a woolen mill.

At last he secured a job in a glove factory and remained five or six weeks.

Sometimes he went home for the weekend, always managing to reach home during darkness and leave before daylight. Often he did not have railroad fare. At these times he walked between his home and his working place.

On occasions he would be very hungry, but managed to stick it out.

Hearing from his wife that it was known in the neighborhood that he was not dead, Cowtan at length returned in December and helped to move the furniture to Brampton.

Has Good Position.

In this town he secured a good position and a few weeks later wrote his creditors saying that he would pay them as soon as possible. So far he has done well and has decided to settle everything he ever owed as soon as he can get the money.

Cowtan states that he did not think the city police would drag for his body, and, in fact, did not know anything about it until he slipped home one night and saw the items in The World stating that the search had been given up.

He is 33 years old now and shows the lines of worry on his forehead.

Cowtan is sincerely sorry for causing trouble to the police and Malt Ac-ford, who all helped to drag the river.
