In Action. The first shots of the day were fired at noon, when two companies of the Royal Grenadiers got mixed up in an exchange with a company of the 13th on Horning Mountain-road. The Grens, were getting a shade the better of it, when three more companies of the Q. O.R., having made a gumshoe advance, suddenly surprised them on both fianks, and there was nothing for it but to rule them out of action. The sounds of firing brought six companies of the Q. O.R. forward on the double, whereupon three more companies of the 13th, also drawn by the brisk fire, came up in support, and, with them, a Maxim gun. All in vain, for they had crossed the railway tracks against the rules, and were advised by the umpires to retire, which they did with visible disappointment. The first shots of the day were fired
