THEIR FIRST SIGHT OF AN AIRPLANE

Population of Little Nicaraguan Village Take to the Woods.

San Juan Del Sur, Nicaragua, March 6.—(Associated Press by mail)—There are even yet in remote parts of the world people who never even heard of an airplane. Some of these people live in the little Nicaraguan village of Gigante, where the naval plane NC-6 was forced down by a hurricane while on its flight from San Diego, Cal., to Panama, along with about a dozen other planes in January.

They thought the NC-6 was a huge albatross, which had come in for some unfortunate mariner who had offended it and they hid in the woods for several hours.

Near the little cove where the NC-6 came down are two ranches. After the Associated Press correspondent had found the missing NC-6 he visited one of these ranches and asked the women if they had seen the plane arrive. One of them replied:

"Mio Dios, I should think so. At the sight of the horrible thing skipping over the white caps, without flapping its wings, and spitting fire from both sides of its body and roaring like 30,000 bulls we all took to the timber where we re-mailed for about four hours. We only came out when we saw a foreign gentleman passing near where we were hiding.

The women added that before the great war, when sailing ships used to visit the Nicaraguan coast to load mahogany and cedar, the captains had told them of a wonderful bird called the albatross that was an inhabitant of the Southern seas and they supposed this bird had come after some offending sailor.

QUIETER TIMES NOW IN MEXICO

First Three Months of Obregon's Rule Pleasantly Disappointing.

Mexico City, March 8.—(Associated Press by Mail)—Mexicans or others who expected President Obregon to use a ruthless hand in ruling the nation have been disappointed in that respect in his record for the first three months of his administration. He has met several uprisings in different parts of the republic with energetic military measures, but the shootings at sunrise which had been predicted have not been recorded.

Nevertheless, at the end of three months, he is not menaced with any apparent revolutionary element which seriously threatens his control. Disturbing factors in several of the Mexican states have been pacified and even Francisco Villa, from ranch home at Canutillo, is sending postcards to government officials which are described as being "intensely humorous and indicating loyalty to the present regime."

Some of President Obregon's efforts to solve the economic and industrial problems, with which his administration is faced, have suffered defeat. His banking scheme was rejected by the Chamber of Deputies. His critics complain that he has failed to outline a definite policy in regard to the operation of the oil fields, one of the disturbing factors in Mexican affairs.

Obregon's agrarian law has been so bitterly opposed by the Catholic church, the dominant religious sect in the republic, that the Archbishop of Mexico has called upon his parishioners to resist it to the utmost.

Industrial Conditions.

The problem of assisting the millions of peons is one of the chief industrial questions. These poor people must first be given work to enable them to live and then must be educated. Speaking more than 100 dialects, they form a mass of heterogeneous population that is not easily moulded into a national unit. Federal commissions are now investigating Indian life, which embraces the bulk of the peon population, with a view to assisting them in fulfilling their immediate needs. Schools are to follow and the necessities of life have been made available.

Although confronted by these tasks, President Obregon has been compelled to absent himself from the national capital at times, either on account of illness or to rest. When he has been able, he has spent sixteen hours a day at the Palace. He arrives there without escort or guard, passing through the streets with far less ostentation than hundreds of foreigners who are here to join in the general clamor for concessions.

At night, he romps with his boys or plays billiard despite his loss of one arm. He meets on an average of 100 persons daily at the palace, and in the newspapers several days ago apologized for being unable to meet more.

Unlike his predecessor, Carranza, who was never known to give a direct answer, Obregon replies to all questions, but keeps to himself his plans for the future.

CHARGES WITH CHEWS

AND SMOKE CIGARS

New York, March 21.—Mrs. Lucy R. Eckstein applied to the supreme court for alimony and counsel fees pending trial of her action for separation from Bernard Eckstein. Eckstein charged in his affidavit that his wife smoked cigars and chewed tobacco. "When I told her to stop," he swore, "she said to me, 'You smoke cigarettes, don't you? Well, when you stop smoking cigarettes I will stop smoking cigars and chewing tobacco.'"

ETHER BRINGS BACK HIS POWER OF SPEECH

Boston, March 21.—Administration of ether to Ernest Young, former British aviator, under detention here pending an investigation as to his citizenship, brought back his lost power of speech. After being shot down behind the German lines, Young became speechless. He subsequently recovered the use of his tongue while in a prison camp. He tumbled from his bed here recently and physicians found that again he could not talk. Dr. Albert Murphy, attached to the medical staff at a Long Island institution, conceived the idea of ether treatment after he had learned some of Young's history. Young began to talk as soon as he came out of the ether.
