Old Notre Dame Bridge Falling—
Discovery of Way to Keep Bread Fresh—Strange Tale of a Vanished Fortune

(Times' Special Correspondence)

Paris, July 22.—The tragic death of a well known Parisian lady named Ferguson, who had been imprisoned in a well for four days by a fall of earth is reported from Vincennes. The body of a woman was found at the bottom of a narrow shaft 50 feet deep which had been dug out of the earth by a fall of earth. The body was found at the bottom of the shaft and was in a state of decomposition. The police are investigating the case.

The police are investigating the case. The body was found at the bottom of the shaft and was in a state of decomposition. The police are investigating the case.

Despite great risk of being themselves buried by a new fall of sand, the sappers labored to save the man from his living death. They had steel ropes made fast round their waists so that they could be hauled to the top of the shaft at once if the sand began to fall again. They worked all through Thursday night and doctors were lowered and fed the man, giving him also injections to maintain his vitality. At the top of the shaft the buried man's wife waited hour after hour with reviving hope.

Then suddenly at eight o'clock on Friday night, when the whole of the head of the man and arm were free, he said faintly, "I am suffocating. I cannot bear it any more. A few moments later he was dead.

Notre Dame Bridge Falling
Ninety-nine out of a hundred Parisians were amazed the other morning to learn that the old Notre Dame bridge was falling in. A few of them, perhaps, had seen the scaffolding there for the last two or three years, and might have guessed that the bridge was in a perilous state of decay and some of the stones have fallen. All heavy traffic across the bridge is forbidden. Navigation under the bridge is likewise prohibited, and an order has been posted that all boats going down the river must follow the right arm of the Seine through the lock in front of the Mint. Boats going up the river are allowed to pass under the bridge only at low tide.

The repairs at present in progress are very extensive, and amount practically to rebuilding and widening the greater part.

Stale bread is to be a thing of the past. Bread that is once fresh is to remain fresh for ever fresh. The discovery is said to have been made in Holland, but its application is to be tried in Paris. The process is exceedingly complicated and scientific, and would require a lengthy explanation, but the way it is done seems simple enough in practice. The baker's oven is to be supplemented in the future with a refrigerating chamber, containing just as many degrees of cold, broadly speaking, as there are degrees of heat in the oven. Thus, the baker, after baking his bread has only to place it in the ice-chamber and keep it up and keep it in a temperature of a degree or two below zero. The bread will keep fresh for months, and perhaps for years. Bureaucratic bakers, therefore, will no longer be required to work at night. The remarkable thing is that the process also works the other way. If stale bread is put in the ice-chamber it will in a short time become fresh again, and will remain fresh for an indefinite period. It becomes frozen, of course, but as soon as it is thawed it appears as perfectly fresh bread. Whether it is as delicious to the taste as stale bread is another question. The people of Paris have not yet had an opportunity of trying it.

A Paris tradesman called at a police station the other night with one of his employees named Louet, whom he accused of having robbed him of $12.50 in coin and $200 in notes. Louet admitted that he had spent the $12.50 and said that the $200 was still at his lodgings. The police magistrate accompanied the two men to Louet's lodgings, where the man's wife declared that she knew nothing of the affair. Under threats of arrest, however, she produced the banknotes, which she had hidden in the bonnet of her baby in its cradle.

A Vanished Fortune
A fortune of $500,000 which belonged to a wealthy Parisian lady named Ferguson, has vanished. His disappearance is as puzzling to the heirs of the estate as it is to the Paris police, who have been asked to find it. Mme. Ferguson was of English nationality, having been born in Nottingham in 1832, and she died in Paris two years ago. She had spent the greater part of her life in France, and her history had been a romantic one. She was married in Paris to a wealthy dentist named Preterre. They lived happily for some time, but ultimately Mme. Preterre quarrelled with her husband and, abandoning her home, formed a marked friendship with the late M. Oisier, a famous philanthropist and art collector. The dentist sought by every means in his power to become reconciled, but failing, obtained a decree of divorce, and his wife reverted to her maiden name of Ferguson. M. Preterre who died several years before her, left her, despite the legal separation, the bulk of his fortune of $500,000 as well as an allowance for life.

Subsequently M. Oisier, whose friendship she had so long enjoyed, also died, but he left all his money to the Pasture Institute.

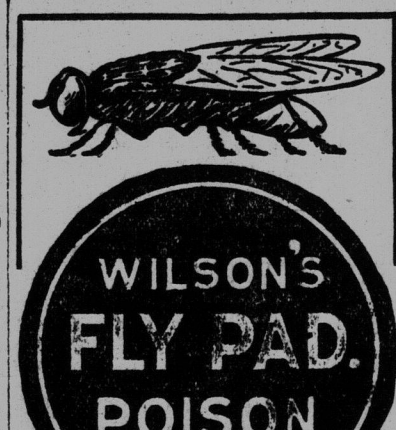

Mme. Ferguson died two years ago, and her only son, Henri Ferguson, laid claim to her estate, but the inventory made by the authorities at the time of her death failed to show the whereabouts of the fortune left to the deceased woman by her divorced husband.

Mother and son had not been on the best of terms since the decree of divorce had been pronounced. Mme. Ferguson appears to have left no will, and it is assumed that if she did not make an anonymous gift of her fortune to some charitable institution, she would have hidden it and then died without revealing the place of concealment.

NO COMMENT ON THE WARNING TO IMMIGRANTS

Superintendent Scott Silent and
Dr. Roche Has Nothing to Say as Yet

Ottawa, July 21.—Not a word of comment on the warning to prospective immigrants from Great Britain, just issued by the Trades and Labor Congress, would be made by W. D. Scott, superintendent of immigration for the dominion government. He is very probable, however, that Dr. Roche, minister of the interior, and under whose jurisdiction the immigration branch co-operates, will bring the contents of the circular in question before his colleagues in the cabinet. Dr. Roche is at present out of the city, but will return tomorrow.

All animal birth records in Central Park, New York, are now being broken when Helen, the lioness, presented six cubs. Three is the ordinary number, but four is not unusual.

PROBING FIRES IN GRIST MILL

Civic Investigation Begun
Yesterday

ONLY SUSPICIONS

J. Harvey Brown and John J. Maynes Gave Evidence—Each
Had Idea of Firebug's Identity

The fires in the old Maynes, Riley Grist Mill in City road, three of which have occurred since early in March and all pieces of alleged incendiarism were a matter of investigation conducted yesterday afternoon by Chief of Police Clark and Magistrate Ritchie. Two witnesses were on the stand, J. Harvey Brown and John J. Maynes. The former stated that he had entertained suspicion that Mr. Maynes was responsible for the fires but that he had not the evidence that would warrant any action against Mr. Maynes. The latter said he had suspected someone else and gave the name in confidence to the authorities. These were the only two witnesses heard and an adjournment was made until Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Recorder Baxter conducted the cross-examinations.

J. Harvey Brown in his testimony said: "The property, commonly known as the old grist mill is situated in the west side of City road just beyond Fowler's factory. At the time which I was negotiating with the Messrs. Maynes, the property consisted of the mill, the machinery, a shed and another old house. Acting with one or two others—my wife and my daughter—I secured an option on the property about March 1 for $7,000. Since that time three fires have occurred there, the first one early in March, the second one about three weeks later, and the last, a few weeks ago. In the fire of March, the loss was about $2,500, and according to a subsequent arrangement, John J. Maynes collected the insurance, and deducted the amount from the option price. This fire was in the lower cellar facing on the track.

About three weeks later there was another fire, which was not very serious. This appeared to have been set in the second floor. On account of the trivial nature of the fire I informed the insurance company that I would not enter a claim, hoping in this way to keep the fire from being recorded, because it was getting difficult to secure any insurance, since that time there has been none at all on the place.

The last, and most serious fire occurred on the night of July 17, and the loss amounted to fully $6,000. I might say that almost from the time of the disposal of the property, Mr. Maynes seemed anxious to get back the machinery in the mill. William Maynes, the other partner in the firm, also attempted to buy it back.

The day before the fire, I visited the mill and I discovered John Maynes in an alley between the grist mill and Fowler's factory. The next I knew of it I was awakened at midnight and informed that the mill was burned down. The machinery is almost a total wreck, and was of such a nature as to totally disable the plant and prevent us from opening it for some time. After I was at the fire for a while, I met Maynes in the street and later when I was looking over the ruins, Maynes followed me into the engine room and seemed very anxious to ascertain the extent of the damage. I intimated that some arrests would probably follow as a result of the damage. He went out. I ordered my son and H. S. Wallace, I went to the rear of the plant to investigate further and he followed us there. I ordered him out. He replied: "You had better have me arrested."

I said I was going to arrest you, Maynes answered again: "I have been at home all night and I can prove it." And as he was leaving he said: "It will take more than you to arrest me."

John J. Maynes took the stand himself. He was instructed that he was not compelled to do this at the present time, but he wished to begin his testimony at the time he was presented to the recorder an agreement between Brown and himself, and asked if according to the contents of the circular he was not a party to the facts about the dealings between them.

He answered: "I have been at home all night and I can prove it." And as he was leaving he said: "It will take more than you to arrest me."

He was told that no contract could interfere with the evidence and he was then satisfied to go on. He was asked what he knew of the fire, because he said he did not feel inclined to make a statement but would merely answer questions.

He first, however, explained to the recorder his version of the option of the financial arrangements which followed, which was about the same as Brown had said. He could not see that it would be a very businesslike proposition for him to set fire to the mill when the damage amounted to $5,000 and he held the sale for $7,000.

He first notice I received of the fire in March," he said, "was when Charles Morgan, a friend of mine told me that he was doing some work on the books at home at the time. When I arrived at the mill, the fire was under control. Chief Kerr was there and I instructed him that he put a ladder to a certain window and put a stream in there around the engine. He said he was going to get the fire out. He did this. The appraisers were at work next day and I received the insurance as Mr. Maynes said. On the second occasion, I showed Brown where the fire had been set, in some twine. I had my suspicions who set the first but it was not Mr. Brown."

He agreed to give to the chief the name of the person whom he suspected, as Mr. Baxter did not want it would spoil the object of the investigation.

Mr. Maynes then gave his reasons why he thought the fire had been set—that is, the second fire—and said that he was not sure he suspected Mr. Brown as having set this fire, for the purpose of getting the $8,000 insurance. The last fire on the night of July 4, he was not present, and testified with the purpose of proving an alibi. He was home on account of his wife being ill, and swore positively that he was not out of the house from 9.15 o'clock until after the alarm was run in.

Mr. Brown cross-questioned him and he asked Maynes what he was doing in the alley the day before last fire. The witness answered that he was inspecting a concrete wall. He was also asked why he was so eager to purchase back the machinery. He denied that he wanted the machinery back, but he only wanted to learn from Mr. Brown what he intended to do with the mill for it was rumored that he did not intend to run it as a corn meal mill. When he had told persons he would like to get back the machinery in the plant, it was just a bluff, he said to get the desired information.

In reply to a query Mr. Maynes said that if he intended setting any fires he would do so in a businesslike way, when he had plenty of insurance.

The court was adjourned before Mr. Brown had finished making the water stand over until Wednesday when several other witnesses will testify in the meantime it was about that something material is bound to develop as a result of the inquiry. Chief Clarke was in court during the hearing.

Charles E. Kipp saw seven deer in one bunch in the woods near his house at Quassamus, Me., one evening last week. As he was watching them a young buck nearly all white jumped out from the bushes nearby. This is the second albino reported in that vicinity recently.

Dr. Fowler's EXTRACT OF Wild Strawberry

Soon Relieved Their Sufferings.
THEIR TROUBLE WAS DIARRHOEA.

Mrs. EDWARD RINGSTON, Mirror, Alta., writes: "Coming to the North West from B.C. in the summer of 1910, we were face to face with the serious problem of being able to secure good drinking water; this we could not get, so were obliged to drink water containing a great deal of alkali, with the result that we were all troubled with Diarrhoea. Fortunately we had a bottle of Dr. Fowler's EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY in the house, which soon relieved our sufferings. I have always kept a bottle in the house since obtaining such beneficial result from its use when my boy, as a baby, was similarly troubled."

"It has always proved a friend in need."

Make up your mind to insist on getting "Dr. Fowler's," when you go to your local dealer. Don't accept some of the "phony" preparations that some of the unscrupulous dealers try to pass off as "Dr. Fowler's."
