THE DEATH OF SENATOR LANDERKIN

PASSED AWAY AFTER FOUR WEEKS' ILLNESS

Funeral of H. Cargill Largely Attended - Number of Lake Superior Company Employees Paid.

Hanover, Ont., Oct. 4.-Senator Landerkin died at home here this afternoon, after an illness of about four weeks. Senator Landerkin was born at Simons, Ont., on July 20th, 1839, and was educated at the local school. He obtained the degree of M.D. at Victoria college, Colburn, in 1863. He was elected to the Commons for South Grey in 1872. He was defeated four years later, but at the elections in 1882, 1887, 1891 and 1896 he was returned. At the last election he was defeated, and later was called to the Senate.

Funeral of H. Cargill. Walkerton, Ont., Oct. 4.-The funeral of the late H. Cargill, M.P., took place here to-day. It was attended by the largest number of people ever seen at a funeral in the county of Bruce. There were over 200 carriages in line. Paving Woodsman. Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 4.-The paymen of the Lake Superior employees began Saturday, when 150 woodsmen were paid. The town is now perfectly quiet. Mr. Johnston has granted a delay of fifteen days for subsidiary companies to file appearances in the receiver suit, so that the company has the time in which to arrange matters.

Under the Ban. Montreal, Oct. 4.-Mgr. Bruchesi, Roman Catholic archbishop of Montreal, to-day excommunicated the French Sunday paper, Les Debats, forbidding the faithful to read it or assist it in any way. The newspaper's offence was ridiculing the clergy. Bodies Found. Winnipeg, Oct. 4.-The bodies of an Indian and Indian boy have been found in Lake Winnipeg, near Big Island. They are supposed to have perished in the storm of September 7th with Rev. Mr. McLaughlin, Methodist missionary, and five other Indian children who have been missing since that date.

WITH MILITARY HONORS. Funeral of Late Louis Warner Yesterday Afternoon-No. 1 Company Fifth Regiment Attended. The remains of the late Louis Warner were laid at rest yesterday afternoon, the funeral taking place from his late residence, Bolton avenue, Victoria West, at 2 o'clock, and later at the Soldiers and Sailors' Home. There was a large attendance. No. 1 company Fifth Regiment, of which deceased was a member, turning out in a body under Capt. Curry, and a large number of members of the other companies being present. There was also a large attendance from Court Vancouver, No. 3735, A. O. F. The cortege left the residence headed by a firing party of the regiment, to the strain of the Dead March, played by the Regiment band. The gun carriage, which bore the casket, was covered with flags. On each side of the carriage were the pall-bearers as follows: Gunners Sturgis, Arnold, Cornwall, Lawson, Wolfenden and Grzeskock. It was followed by the mourners, after which came the Foresters.

At the Soldiers and Sailors' Home there was a large attendance of sympathizing friends, and impressive services were conducted by Rev. J. P. Ellis. Many followed the cortege to the naval cemetery, where the last rites were performed. A B-Greenwood conducted religious services on behalf of the Foresters, after which the firing party fired a volley over the grave.

The Bradford coroner's inquest in the Irene Cole murder case has commenced. THE RESULT IN VICTORIA.

It is scarcely necessary for the Times to comment on the nature of the victory achieved by the Liberals of Victoria on Saturday. Both sides put strong men in the field. The Conservatives had the advantage in many respects. All their candidates were old hands at the political game. Three of them had served several terms in the Legislature. Up till Saturday two of the men on the list had never met with a reverse. One had been a candidate for years, and up to the present had been thought invincible. One of the Liberal candidates was a comparative stranger to the general public. In the special field to which he had devoted himself he was very popular. Two of them had met with reverses when they essayed to break away from the narrow sphere of municipal affairs. The other had served as a member of the Legislature. The Conservatives claimed that they derived special strength from the personnel of their candidates. Possibly they are hardly so sure about that point to-day. In any case the Liberals have the best of reasons for congratulating themselves upon the result. They displayed admirable judgment in their selection. After the choice was made they went to work like men to achieve victory. Every personal feeling was put away. Harmony and good feeling prevailed. Earnest work was the principal factor in the magnificent result.

The Young Liberals in particular are deserving of congratulations for their part in the campaign. Their enthusiasm was inspiring to all. But with enthusiasm was combined practical work of the most effective kind. The energy was not all dissipated in shouting. Liberals of Victoria know now what can be done with a clean list of voters, vigilance against corrupt practices, unity and harmony in the party, and with but one common purpose in view, the triumph of Liberalism. Liberalism was indeed triumphant in British Columbia on Saturday, but the greatest victory of all was won in Victoria. It is not often it is given to Liberals to smother so many Conservative ideas in one day. The Liberalism of Victoria has been proven not to be the passing whim of a day, a month or a year, but an established principle.

THE GENERAL RESULT.

It may be some time before the actual relative strength of the two great parties in the new Legislature is determined. There are five constituencies yet in the doubtful list. But it is fully determined that the McBride government, with the electoral machinery in its hands, with the patronage of the province at its disposal, and with the prestige of power to help it, all of which influences it made use of to the utmost, is hopelessly beaten and cannot carry on. The best the government can hope for is to be swept out of office. The probability is that when full returns are in and the partisan hilloperies of returning officers corrected by independent authorities, the government will find itself in an actual minority. At the present time of writing eighteen Liberals, seventeen Conservatives and two Socialists are known to have been returned. Should Mr. McBride secure the remainder of the doubtful seats, succeeded in reconstructing his government and electing his ministers, he would have but one of a majority over the opposition of Liberals and Socialists. A majority of one in a House of forty-two members cannot be considered a factor of absolute safety. Business could not be carried on under such conditions.

But the fates are not likely to favor the government even to the extent of allowing it a majority of one. There is a possibility of the Liberals and Conservatives being equally divided, with the Socialists holding the other two seats. What would naturally be expected of Premier McBride in such an eventuality? He should resign at once, of course. With his cabinet shattered, and lack of confidence in his government expressed in the great majority of the constituencies of the province, the duty of the Premier is plain enough. But he will not follow the path of obvious duty. On the contrary, it is extremely probable Mr. McBride will follow the example of his predecessors, who are responsible for most of the disabilities under which British Columbia groans to-day. Beaten from his position, he will probably try to effect a combination with some of the forces sent out against him. Appeals are already being addressed to a part of the opposition that it is essential in the interests of the country that political turmoil should cease for a time.

There can be no peace until the victory of Saturday is followed to its logical conclusion, the complete rout of the McBride forces. The Premier declared for party lines as a means of bringing to an end the repeated slump of politicians from one side of the House to the other. The test Mr. McBride craved has been applied. It is too late now to enter a plea for mitigation of the sentence on the ground of patriotism. The members of the House, we have not the slightest doubt, will stand firmly by the principles upon which they were elected. If Premier McBride refuses to follow the only course that will bring fixed and stable government to the province, he will be fought at every step he attempts to take. Eventually the will of the majority will prevail.

In face of the disabilities under which the Liberals of the province fought the result of the election is surprising. The party went into the fight leaderless, which, it may frankly be admitted now, was a great handicap. The faith displayed by the electorate in the candidates was the most splendid tribute that could possibly be paid to their personal attributes. Although in a great number of constituencies the Liberal forces were split up by the presence in the field of representatives of the elements whose legitimate place is in the ranks of Liberalism, the closeness of the contest in almost every instance proves how strong the principles of Liberalism are in the province. The mouths of the braggers who have of late been prating in season and out of the wane of Liberalism in British Columbia are closed for a time.

VICTORIA EXHIBITION.

Having attended to their political affairs, it should now be the chief business of the people of this neighborhood, of the farmers, and the residents of Victoria especially, to turn to with vim and enthusiasm, and make the exhibition a success. All the elements necessary to such a desirable consummation are already in combination. All that remains to be done is for the public to attend to its duty. The entry list is larger than it ever was, special attractions of more than usual merit have been provided, and it but remains for the public to encourage exhibitors by their patronage to ensure the permanence of the fair. The weather man is not in the best of humor to-day, but his brow will surely clear up and his features assume a smiling aspect before the hour of the formal opening.

The men who have striven through years of adversity, who have endured the disappointments and discouragements of dull times and other adverse influences not necessary to mention, who have been filled with a faith and hope that could not be shaken, will meet with their reward if the Victoria fair fails to make a success this year, through the co-operation of the public in general, who from the first should have been quite as much interested in the show as those who bore the burdens of the early struggles. The Times has been asked what will happen should the weather prove unfavorable and the public apathetic. We absolutely refuse to consider such a possibility. The elements are merely indulging in a disagreeable frolic in order that the contrast of the following days shall appear more pronounced. The increased interest in scientific, advanced agriculture, combined with the substantial growth in the farming and manufacturing population, should be more than sufficient to overcome all adverse influences.

DUTY OF LIBERALS.

The victory for Liberalism in British Columbia on Saturday was a marvellous one, all things considered. But the work of reform is just begun. Mr. McBride is in, and he will stay in until he is kicked out. All manner of intrigue will be set afoot in an attempt to defeat the obvious will of the people. The representatives of the Liberal party must get together, select their leader and prepare to fight the government from sunrise to sunset. Any elements that combine with the government in an attempt to set at defiance the mandate of the electorate will be condemned with the government. No doubt the Premier thinks, from his experience in public affairs in British Columbia, that it will be an easy task to get together a winning combination. The final returns may remove all hope of that. If the final returns are not so convincing, then the task will fall to the Liberal party. Every minister put up for re-election must be fought to the last ditch. The Premier must be made to comply to the letter with the requirements of the constitution. It is not easy to see how he is going to fill up his government unless he makes it unanimous with a complete bench of lawyers. Victoria having rejected the storm and stress of the trans-Atlantic passage for twenty years with her original engines and boilers, and she has the remarkable record of never having missed a day in all that time through accident or breakdown. She has remained continually at work except for two or three weeks in each year, when she was taken off the route and overhauled for the season's work. In the twenty-five years from 1874 to 1899 she made 293 round trips between New York and Liverpool, crossing the Atlantic more than 500 times and travelling over 1,800,000 miles, or sufficient to make the circuit of the earth over seventy times. During her long period of service she has carried without accident over 200,000 passengers.

SIR HECTOR'S FAME.

Sir Hector Macdonald is but a memory, but his fame, the glory of his achievements, will endure as long as there remains upon the earth a tree and worthy specimen of the British race. His friends refused to permit the stain cast upon the character of the heroic Highlander by the envious snobs, the product of caste and privilege which have gone so much to cast a shadow upon the renown of the British army, to remain without making an effort to purge the records. The commissioners appointed to investigate, as it is well known, have reported, and that report contains a complete vindication of the late general as his friends could desire. The document is the most remarkable that ever passed through the hands of printers. The character of the man who was honored by his Queen as few of "common stock" have been, whose deeds and successes were the pride and delight of his countrymen, has been washed of all calling for reproach or condemnation in the following document:

Government Buildings, Colombo, 28th June, 1903.

In reference to the grave charges made against the late Sir Hector Macdonald, we, the appointed and designated commissioners, individually and collectively declare on oath that after the most careful, minute and exhaustive inquiry and investigation of the whole circumstances and facts connected with the sudden and unexpected death of the late Sir Hector Macdonald, unanimously and unmistakably find absolutely no reason or crime whatsoever which would create feelings such as would determine outside in prof-ference to conviction of any crime affecting the moral and irreproachable character of so brave, so fearless, so glorious and unparalleled a hero; and we firmly believe the cause which gave rise to the inhuman and cruel suggestions of crime were prompted through vulgar feelings of spite and jealousy in his rising to such a high rank of distinction in the British army; and while we have taken the most reliable and trustworthy evidence from every accessible and conceivable source, have without hesitation come to the conclusion that there is not visible the slightest particle of truth in foundation of any crime, and we find the late Sir Hector Macdonald has been cruelly assassinated by vile and slandering tongues.

While honorably acquitting the late Sir Hector Macdonald of any charge whatsoever, we cannot but deplore the sad circumstances of the case that have fallen so disastrously on one who we have found innocent of any crime attributed to him. (Signed) DR. MATTHEW WILSON. DR. D. MACNAUGHTON. JAMES BRODIE. GERALD HEATHCOTE. ARTHUR LANG.

STEAMSHIP BUILDING.

The steamship Britannic is to be broken up. She has made her last trip across the Atlantic. All who take an interest in ships probably know that this vessel is one of the most remarkable craft ever constructed, and is the finest example that could be given of the excellence of products of British shipyards. The Britannic was the first of the high-speed, luxuriously furnished trans-Atlantic liners with which the world is familiar to-day; for the very latest vessels are merely a development in size, speed and comfort of certain features which were first embodied in this ship. She is further remarkable because of the unusual endurance of her engines and boilers, which present an instance of continuous service that, as far as we know, is without parallel in the history of the mercantile marine. It is generally known that the engines and boilers with which she is now making her last voyage across the Atlantic are the same that were put into the boat by the Harland & Wolf firm when she was launched in 1874, or nearly thirty years ago.

The Scientific American says to the Britannic belongs the credit of being the first boat to reduce the time between Queenstown and Sandy Hook to less than eight days, her record for the earlier passage being seven days and sixteen hours. The Germanic, a sister ship to the Britannic, which was launched shortly after her, is still in the Atlantic service; but she has been re-engined and re-boilered, and thoroughly brought up to date. The older boat, however, has been steadily breasting the storm and stress of the trans-Atlantic passage for twenty years with her original engines and boilers, and she has the remarkable record of never having missed a day in all that time through accident or breakdown. She has remained continually at work except for two or three weeks in each year, when she was taken off the route and overhauled for the season's work. In the twenty-five years from 1874 to 1899 she made 293 round trips between New York and Liverpool, crossing the Atlantic more than 500 times and travelling over 1,800,000 miles, or sufficient to make the circuit of the earth over seventy times. During her long period of service she has carried without accident over 200,000 passengers.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Conducted in Calvary Baptist Church in Celebration of Pastor's Fifth Year. Yesterday marked the beginning of Rev. J. F. Vichert's fifth year as pastor of Calvary Baptist church and was made the occasion for services of a most inspiring character. Rev. Roland D. Grant, D.D., whose reputation as a preacher and lecturer is well known in this city, was the speaker both morning and evening. In spite of the unfavorable weather a large congregation gathered in the morning and listened with unflinching attention to a keen, close study of the developments of the Christ idea throughout both the Old and New Testaments. The doctor referred to the promise in Ezekiel of one who should come and who should bruise the serpent's head. When Cain was born Eve said: "I have gotten a man—literally the coming one—from the Lord." This becomes the name they give to God, for the long hope of the world will be fulfilled. The sermon was a splendid illustration of the fact that the treatment of a doctrinal subject can be made most fascinating. In the evening the subject was "From Tarsus to Rome," a character study of Saul. Reference was made first to the conditions prevailing in Tarsus when Saul was born. The Roman athlete, the Greek philosopher, and the Jewish ritualist, all were at their height here in Damascus, and his early development. The discussions among the parties, and the standing for the letter of the law and the other the spirit, were described. To the latter of these belonged Saul, the teacher, Gamaliel. Saul is introduced to us first in connection with the stoning of Stephen, which was very vividly pictured by the preacher. From this scene Saul went hurrying to Damascus to persecute the Christians there. On his way he is converted, and, smitten with blindness, he is led into Damascus, where he receives sight and teaching at the hands of Ananias. Saul's career as a preacher and his reception at the hands of the people wherever he went, his persecutions, his sufferings, were pictured with great power and pathos. Then came the final journey to Rome and his supposed martyrdom at the hands of Nero. The presentation of the life of Saul was very impressive, and was most impressive, and was followed throughout with breathless interest by the large congregation which crowded the church to overflowing, so that many had to be denied admittance. But many had appropriate music rendered by the choir under the leadership of Mr. G. F. Watson, and solos were effectively rendered by Mr. J. Grant and Miss Zoe Buchanan. Dr. Grant is to lecture in Calvary church to-night, giving a character study of Job.

FAIR AT DAWSON.

Was Largely Attended and Proved a Splendid Success—Display of Vegetables. The first Yukon exposition has just closed in Dawson. The undertaking was a great success among the public ventures attempted in the North, especially of significance in relation to the development of the country for a permanent population. Vegetables were of very large size. One turnip was exhibited which weighed twenty-one pounds. Many were exhibited running from ten to fifteen pounds. They represented six hundred varieties of turnips on a piece of ground fifteen feet square. Cabbages of fine, solid heads were exhibited in great numbers. Red cabbage matured early. Potatoes, the most stable product of commerce for all the year, were exhibited from several parts of the Yukon basin. From one potato flower P. X. Lagerroote, of Kirkman, near Dawson, raised 100 pounds of potatoes after multiplying the increase three seasons. The potatoes of different varieties ripen in various parts of the Yukon basin. Those exhibited in Dawson averaged about three specimens to the pound. Tomatoes were also exhibited. Splendid specimens of five varieties were shown, also ball barley, which runs sixty-five bushels to the acre. White flint wheat, red chaff wheat, oats, barley and other such grains were on exhibition from several parts of the Yukon basin. The wild hay is worth $60 to the ton and the other $80.

The fair doubtless will be a great incentive to further farming and gardening in the Yukon. It is expected that within five years or less the Yukon will import few potatoes or hay. It now imports no garden truck. The country raises an abundance of garden truck, to supply itself and that with little effort. The $30,000 pavilion of the Dawson Athletic Club was used as an exhibition building by the fair management. The hall was a lower of beauty and effects of bunting, flags, electrical displays, great banks of native and domestic flowers and numerous booths. The main hall is more than 100 feet long and thirty wide. Aside from the main machinery hall, containing specimens of machinery used in mining in the Klondike and native dogs and horses. A span of horses weighing 1,300 pounds each, raised on Gold Run creek, were exhibited.

Forty native white babies were exhibited one day. In the arts room were displays of paintings. Indian work, Yukon jewelry work and fancy work, mirrors, mammoth and mastodon remains and tusks were among the interesting exhibits.

A big stage was erected at one end of the main pavilion. Three hundred school children took part in the exercises. A military band gave concerts, minstrel shows were held at nights in the main pavilion and many other attractions were provided. The fair lasted four days. As many as from 2,500 to 3,000 people attended during a single evening. Hundreds of dollars were awarded in cash prizes and diplomas were issued.

W. G. Luker is gathering many of the horticultural and other exhibits to take to Eastern Canada and to the States for exhibition this winter. Next year an exhibit will be sent to St. Louis.
