

The provinces to forego the right to level corporation and personal income tax: done on a temporary basis and with compensation, future open for discussion.

The provinces to forego succession duty levies: The dominion has enacted its own tax law in this field as a permanent measure and is not likely to ask the provinces to withdraw.

The provinces to surrender subsidies and receive instead, where warranted, a "national adjustment grant" based on their budgetary position in relation to the cost of providing standard services: No developments but improved economic position in most provinces makes adjustment of grants or subsidies less urgent and the proposal if considered will be dealt with in connection with taxation adjustments.