

It was soon found that a Technical Section of the Bureau would be of great value. Dr. H. M. Tory, former President of the National Research Council, undertook to direct this section. Through its activities he has been instrumental in placing many of those with technical qualifications in touch with government departments and industries requiring their services.

It is intended that the work of the Voluntary Service Registration Bureau should be absorbed by the new Department of National War Services, and that more time and thought may be given to finding the widest possible scope for those anxious to help their country.
