PECULIAR

Claims Note Has Been Raised

One Denies and the Other Affirms-An Echo of the Astrologer, Tomerlin.

The case of Fritz Morritz vs. Harry Baker heard in the territorial away court this morning before Mr. Justice Craig was one of those peculiar actions wherein one of the parties to the suit swore to one thing and the other diametrically opposite. In this instance, too, there is also a certainty that some one has committed the most deliberate perjury, but there is also the insinuation of forgery, a note upon which the suit was brought having been raised, and other things of a more or less sensational nature. Morritz and Baker were friends un-

The story of plaintiff and the evice of the note were absolutely denied by Baker on the stand. He admitted borrowing $10 at one time and $22 at another, the latter being spent principally for groceries while they were living together. Never borrowed another cent from him. Had paid back $5 but insists it was currency and not dust. Witness spoke of the note transaction and identified the paper put in as evidence, but insisted the figures had been raised. The note he drew up and signed was for $25 and not for $200, he insisting that the figure "5" had been erased and two ciphers added instead.

Baker on his direct examination refreshed his memory as to dates by means of a pocket memorandum and during his cross-examination he got badly tangled as to the time he had which was the front and back of the book. Entries he said had been made paphazard without reference to rotation. On one page, for instance, though plainly marked yet he could not decipher what the year was in the entry of January on the following from Whitehorse in a smalling page. Morritz had told him he was atraid he was in trouble. He Magistrate Starnes Will had recently peered into the future through the agency of the eminent astrologer Tomerlin, who had told him he would fall down and hurt himself. That had come frue. He, (Morritz) so witness said, had remarked that he feared he was going to have some difficulty with Baker, and if he did he would fix him. James Bloom Returns.

Mr. James M. Bloom, who came here early in 1900 and who did a great deal of prospecting for the next eighteen months, arrived in Dawson yesterday after having spent the winter on the outside principally in Tacoma and Spokane. He will at once begin operations on a valuable claim owned by him on Thistle creek. His son Arthur, who for two years was pressman on the Nugget, is now filling a similar position in the office of the Miner at Nelson, B.
