Again, as to the argument that our soldiers at Waterloo wore trousers, he points out that "the victories of Wellington were chiefly due to the prowess of the kilted Highlanders, 'those petticoated devils' that Napoleon dreaded, and there is not any doubt that the victory of Trafalgar was due chiefly to the tory of Trafalgar was due chiefly to the genius of Nelson, who wore knee-

As to the allegation of inceased ability in the arts and sciences in this trousered age, "What art productions of this epoch can compare," the demands, "with the incomparable productions of the Renaisance?" The science that we are Renaissance? The science that we free just beginning to understand was well known to the Knights Templars, the Rosierucians and the monks of the middle ages, who wisely conserved it to themselves to use for the benefit of the people rather than allow it to be wide-spread and used for criminal purposes by hypnotists and other charlatans as at the present time. As for literature, it is simply absurd to compare any writers of this period (except perhaps Tennyson) with Shakespeare."

Safety Found in an Elevator. (Rochester, N. Y., Post-Express.)

Many persons have an objection to riding in elevators, or, more properly speaking, this objection should be classed as a feeling of dread or fear, but according to the superintendent of a big office building in Philadelphia, the a big office building in Frinadelphia, the safest place for a person to be in is in an elevator—that is, thatistically speaking. In the set of elevators for which statistics have been kept by the superintendent there has been an average transportation of 2,400,000 persons each year for seven years, an aggregate of 16,800,000, and of this number but one person has been injured, and that injury did not result fatally.

The first remark to be made with regard to profane swearing is that popular ethics on the subject are in a thoroughly chaotic state. The ordinary Sunday day school condemnation of the habit is as inconsistent as the pulpit condemnation of gambling which leave the stock exchange untouched. For surely the first thing to be recog nized about the man who misses his train and says: "D—!" is that his language has no conscious reference to any theological dogma. If the man who, at the Professor's Breakfast Table, ut tered three words, two of which "Webster's Unabridged," and "the first an emphatic monosyllabe, had really "visualemphatic monosyllabe, had really "visualized" St. Paul's conception of a groaning and travailing Universe (including Webster's Unabridged), I for one would find a unique interest in his view-point. But let any reader ask the next man in the train who speaks of "the deuce" exactly what he knows or believes of the Dusii. The result will be pure blank. This obvious fact is not recognized exactly what he knows of beneblank. The Dusii. The result will be pure blank. This obvious fact is not recognized in current ethics. The broken collar button, the suddenly punctured tire, the train missed by half a minute, produce an inevitable overflow of nervous discharge. Now, human behavior under these conditions may take several forms. Some people let their emotions explode down "ticket-of-leave" channels. The present writer was once installed in a home wherein the domestic encumbrance was an aggressive adherent of the Salvation Army. When diplomatic relations with the mistress reach breaking point, the electrical condition of the kitchen atmosphere was always indicated by the mosphere was always indicated by the overheard strains of: 'Tis life everlastoverheard strains of: 'Ting; 'tis heaven below.
